This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE EDITOR'S PREFACE.

THE ecclesiastical records, which are brought together in the following sheets, have little or nothing in common, beyond their relation to the city which claims the filial regard of THE MAITLAND CLUB.

i. The Book of Our Lady College.

The Register which takes the first place in the volume, THE BOOK OF THE COLLEGIATE CHURCH OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY AND SAINT ANNE, or (as it seems to have been commonly called[1]) OUR LADY COLLEGE, is printed from the more perfect of two contemporary copies, duly authenticated by the subscriptions of the notaries by whom they were transcribed, under the authority of the Official General of Glasgow. Both records are preserved in the archives of the city, where they appear to have been deposited before the end of the sixteenth century.[2] They bear the

This was not the first judicial proceeding in which The Book of Our Lady College was adduced in evidence. In the accounts of the treasurer of the city for the year 1575, the following entries occur: "Item, the xij. daye of December, to Alexander Lindsaye, at the provost and baillies command, to ryn to Edinburght withe the Fundation Buik of the New Kirk, in Schyr Johne Withirspwnes caus, x. schillingis. Item, for ane skyn to beir it in to hald it dry, iiij. schillingis." (Burgh Records of the City of Glasgow, M.D.LXXIII.—M.D.LXXXI., p. 60. Glasg. 1832. Pre-same date, that of the year 1549, when the erection and endowment of the church (which was contemplated as early, at least, as the year 1523[3]) would seem to have been completed.

The Founder.

The memorials which have been preserved of the chief founder, James Houstoun, Subdean of Glasgow, although somewhat scanty, embrace, probably, almost all that it could now interest us to know of his life. His own affectionate piety has recorded the name of his mother, with the date of her decease[4]; and, from a judicial proceeding which will hereafter be adverted to,[5] we might, perhaps, infer that he could claim kindred, on his father's side, with the old and knightly family of Houstoun of that Ilk, in the shire of Renfrew. We find him in the year 1525,[6] in possession of a

On a leaf at the beginning of the book which has been taken as the text of these sheets, the following lines are written in a contemporary hand:

"Hic liber pertinet
To beir it veil in mynd
Ad me Magistrum Vardlav
Baith courtas and kynd
Si quisquis inuenerit
To giue it him again
Habebit pecuniam
The quhilk sal make him fain."

The same page bears this memorandum: "This buik ressauit be me fra Mr James Wardlaw contenand fyftie ane leyffis of parchment to be delyuerit be me to him agane the morne Subscryvit with my hand at Edinburgh the xxj day of December fourscoir twelff yeris [1592] James Striuiling." The volume still contains the same tale of fifty-one folios.

[3] Pp. 79, 80, 83. The first deed of erection was executed in the year 1528, (pp. 50, 51.). The church itself would appear to have been built before the following summer, when the community of Glasgow endowed it with a portion of their lands in the Gallow-moor, (pp. 131, 132.). The year 1532 is the date of the next considerable benefaction which the College received, (pp. 10, 107.). Of the subsequent grants, one series belongs to the year 1539, (pp. 57, 60); another, to the year 1542 (pp. 6, 18, 22, 52, 61, 63); and a third, to the year 1549, (pp. 38–44, 108–118, 134–136, 141–143.). The latest deed engrossed in the Register is dated on the thirteenth of August, in the year last mentioned.

benefice and cure, the name of which may be familiar to the members of the Club, as the scene, two centuries afterwards, of the pastoral labours of the zealous Wodrow, namely, the vicarage of Eastwood, in the deanery of Rutherglen. About the year 1527[7] he succeeded Roland Blacader as Subdean of Glasgow; and this dignity, to which the rectory of the parishes of Cadder and Monkland was attached, he continued to hold during his life. He was chosen Rector of the University of Glasgow in the year 1534, and filled the office, by successive re-elections, until the year 1541.[8] By the latter will of Archbishop Dunbar, who died in 1547, he was appointed one of the executors of that learned and munificent churchman, of whose confidence and affection he enjoyed a large share. To him specially was entrusted the erection of the stately sepulchre of brass which covered the Archbishop's grave in the chancel of the cathedral.[9] He was charged also with the endowment and regulation of the obsequies and yearly commemoration to be performed for the soul's repose of the departed prelate; as well as with the repairs of a spire or belfry, the founding of certain bells, and the purchase of the episcopal ornaments, which the Archbishop wished to bequeath to his metropolitan church.[1]

[7] Roland Blacader appears as Subdean of Glasgow on the twenty-second of April, 1524, (pp. 81, 82) having held that dignity so early as the year 1503. (Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. ii. p. 506.). He is recorded in the Obituary of Glasgow to have survived the year 1540, (id. p. 615); but, if there be not a mistake in this date, he must have resigned the Subdeanery many years previously. James Houstoun appears as Subdean in May 1527, (below, pp. 85, 87); and continues to be so designated, throughout the long series of deeds which fill the subsequent sheets, until his death, in the middle of the century.

(Crawfurd's Lives of the Officers of the Crown and of the State in Scotland, p. 77. Edinb. 1726.).

[1] The Archbishop's will is preserved in the

Between the death of Dunbar and the appointment of his successor, Bethune, several years elapsed; and, during the vacancy, Houstoun was preferred to be Vicar General of the see.[2] In this office he died about the year 1551, commending "his soul to Almighty God, the Blessed Virgin Mary, and all the glorious company of heaven; and leaving his body to be buried within the Collegiate Church which he had founded in the city of Glasgow."[3] A copy of his testament, which is dated on the eighth of October 1550, has been preserved,[4] and is printed in the Appendix to these prefatory remarks.

Revenues of the College.

The revenues with which Our Lady College was endowed, were derived partly from lands and houses within the precincts, or in the close neighbourhood, of the archiepiscopal city; partly, from the fruits of the parish churches of Dalry, in the deanery of Kyle and Cunningham, and of Mayboill, in the deanery of Carrick.

[3] Appendix to the Preface, No. I.

[4] In the Record of Confirmations before the Vicar General of Glasgow, in Her Majesty's General Register House at Edinburgh.

The provision made by the Founder for the service of his church, embraced a provost, eight canons or prebendaries, and three choristers.[5] Three prebendaries were added by the bounty of subsequent benefactors, so that the number of prebends in the College was in all thirteen.

Number of Prebends.

The Provost was to have for his pension, all the fruits, oblations, and emoluments, together with the manse and glebe, of the vicarage of Dalry, under deduction of ten pounds in money and six acres of land which were set apart for the support of a vicar residing at Dalry, and serving in the cure of that parish. The right of patronage, as well of the Provostry of the Collegiate Church of Saint Mary and Saint Anne, as of the vicarage of Dalry, was vested in the Abbot and Convent of the Benedictine monastery of Kilwynning, to whom the benefice originally belonged, and with whose consent it was transferred to Our Lady College. The collation to both offices was declared to be with the Archbishop of Glasgow.[6]

1. The Provost.

The first prebend was to bear the name of the Holy and Undivided Trinity, and its possessor was to have the style of Archpriest. In the absence of the Provost he was to exercise the jurisdiction of that dignitary, and to preside as well in the choir as in the chapter of the College. His salary was to be one half of the fruits of the perpetual vicarage of Mayboill, with an acre of land in Saint Anne's croft in the common moor of Glasgow. The presentation of the prebendary was reserved to the Prioress and Convent of the Cistertian nunnery of North Berwick, who, as the patrons of the church of Mayboill, gave their consent to the alienation of that benefice in favour of Our Lady College, under burden of a yearly salary of ten pounds, with a manse, a toft, and a croft, to a vicar serving the cure, and having his residence at Mayboill. The Archpriest was to be collated, and instituted to his office, by the ordinary of the diocese.[7]

2. The Archpriest; or Prebendary of the Holy Trinity.

[5] Pp. 7, 9. [6] Pp. 6–13. [7] Pp. 13–24.

3. The Sacristan.

The second prebend was that of the Greater Sacrist, whose duties the Foundation sets forth in considerable detail. He was to keep the books, chalices, copes, vestments, and ornaments, both of the high altar and of the other altars in the church; to bring them to the choir in time of divine service; and to deliver them to the persons officiating, either by himself or by a servant wearing a surplice. He was to have a clerk under him to ring the bells at the appointed times, and to supply the church with fire and water. He himself was farther charged generally with preserving both church and chancel in all decency and cleanness; with lighting the candles on the high altar and on the "heirss,"[8] and extinguishing them, at the proper seasons; and with seeing that the church linen was duly washed and mended once a-year. His stipend was one half of the fruits of the vicarage of Mayboill. Certain revenues also were set apart for providing candles of tallow to light the church in the winter season, from Allhallowmass or the Feast of All Saints (the first of November), or earlier if need were, to Candlemass or the Feast of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin (the second of February); as well as for finding the College in wax lights, [8] This term is still used in our northern shires to denote, as in France, a pendent chandelier; but in the passage in the text (p. 25), and, perhaps, generally until after the Reformation, the "heirss" would appear to have been the name given to a bench, bier or stage in the chancel on which lights were placed. Thus, in a record of the year 1560, mention is made of "xviij brassin chandlaris quhilk stuid one the lang herse in the queir of Sanct Nicholace parroche kirk; tua gryt chandlaris of Sanct Nicholass hie altar, with the sacrament chandlar," etc. (Extracts from the Council Register of the Burgh of Aberdeen, 1398–1570, pp. 328, 329. Aberdeen: Printed for the Spalding Club. 1845.).

The same article of ecclesiastical furniture seems, in the fourteenth century, to have been called the perfi. In a deed of the year 1387, this passage occurs: "Item de terris predictis inuenirentur quattuor clerici in ecclesia parochiali de Ellon cum cappis et superpellicijs qui scirent sufficienter legere et cantare · Item quarta pars de Eister Ellone tenetur inuenire domum pro scolaribus apud Ellon · Item quarta pars de Candellan tenetur inuenire super le perfi coram magno altarj viginti quatuor candelas sufficientes et has [bis] in anno tenetur renouare." (Registrum Episcopatus Aberdonensis, vol. i. p. 178. Edinb. 1845.). The context, perhaps, might warrant a conjecture that "le perfi" bore some relation to the "parvisium" of Matthew Paris, if not to "the parvise" which has perplexed the commentators on Chaucer.

both great and small, in torches, and in wine and bread. The right of presentation to the Sacrist's prebend lay with the Prioress and Convent of North Berwick; the collation and institution, with the Archbishop.[9]

The Sacrist Minor.

A subsequent clause of the Foundation prescribes the office of the Lesser Sacrist, who was to be elected by the Provost and prebendaries. Beside waiting on the Sacrist Major, and assisting him in his duties, in a fair surplice, he was bound to be present at Matins, High Mass, and Vespers, both on Sundays and on other holidays of observance; to ring the bells at such hours as should be appointed by the College; to light the candles, and torches, and to put them out, in due season; to place the vestments on the altar; to open and shut the church doors, and to keep their keys.[1]

4. The Master of the Song School; or Prebendary of Saint Anne.

The third prebend was named in honour of Saint Anne. The prebendary was required to be learned and expert in playing on the organ, and to perform on it daily according to the use and wont of the metropolitan church. He was bound also to keep a Song School for the instruction of youth in plain-song and descant. His benefice was the rent of a house in the street called the Walcargate (now known as the Saltmarket). He was to be nominated by the bailies and council of the city, and to be admitted to his office by the Provost of the College.[2] We learn incidentally from a subsequent page,[3] that the Song School stood on the west side of the church; and traces of its existence occur for more than half a century after the Reformation.[4]

[4] "The scuile sumtyme callit The Sang Scuile togidder with the foirfront thairof," is enumerated among certain portions of the common property of the city, which it was resolved to sell, on the twenty-fourth of December, 1588, in order to defray the debt incurred by the community in taking measures of precaution against the plague. (Memorabilia of the City of Glasgow, selected from the Minute Books of the Burgh, MDLXXXVIII.—MDCCL., pp. 27, 28. Glasgow, 1835: Printed for private circulation [by Dr. Smith of Cruthertland]). In the accounts of the city treasurer,

5. Prebend of Saint Mary the Virgin.

The fourth prebend, that of Saint Mary the Virgin, was endowed with the rents of certain lands and houses in the town and suburbs. Its patronage belonged to the bailies and council of the city; the collation, to the Archbishop.[5]

6. Prebend of Saint James the Apostle.

To the fifth prebend, styled after Saint James the Apostle, were assigned the rents of divers tenements within the burgh, and two acres of land in the common moor. The election of the prebendary was in the bailies and council: he was to be admitted by the Provost of the College.

7. Prebend of Saint Roche.

The sixth prebend was designated after Saint Roche or Rocque, a confessor of the fourteenth century, to whose intercession the popular belief ascribed many instances of miraculous deliverance from the terrors of the plague.[6] The prebendary, beside certain payments from houses within the burgh, had assigned to him the lands belonging to the Church of Saint Roche, in the moor of Glasgow; in which he was bound, thrice a-week, to say mass and other offices used and wont, "for the soul of its founder, of worshipful memory, Thomas Mureheid, prebendary of Stobo." He was farther required (with the consent of the bailies and council of the city, patrons of Saint Roche's, and of Nicholas Witherspowne, its chaplain), to be present with the other prebendaries of Our Lady College, at Matins, High Mass, Vespers, and Complin, and to take part with them in these offices, except at such times as he was obliged to perform service at Saint Roche's. The prebendary was to be chosen by the bailies and council of the city, and to receive institution from the ordinary of the diocese.[7] for the year 1609, there is entered a payment of twenty pounds, "gifin upon the third day of Merche, 1608, to Jon Buchan, Maister of the Sang Scole, for Witsonday and Martymes termes maill of his hous, 1608." (Id. p. 70.). See also Burgh Records of the City of Glasgow, M. D. LXXIII.—M. D. LXXXI. pp. 100, 116.

[5] Pp. 26–31.

[6] He was held in especial honour in France and Italy. In the former country, he was so commonly invoked for succour in time of pestilence, that the mal Saint Roch came to be but another name for the plague.

[7] P. 32.

The seventh prebend, named in honour of Saint Kentigern, bishop and confessor, was endowed with an acre of land in the common moor, and a house beside the Tolbooth, on the west side of the High Street. The election of its possessor belonged to the bailies and council of the city; his admission, to the Provost of the College.[8]

8. Prebend of Saint Mungo.

Nicholas Witherspowne, vicar of Strathaven in the deanery of Rutherglen, founded the eighth prebend, called after Saint Nicholas, for a chaplain being of his own kindred, to offer prayers for the repose of the founder, of his parents and benefactors, and to take part, generally, in all the offices incumbent on the other canons of the church. The prebendary, whose salary arose from the rents of grounds and houses in the city of Glasgow, and the burgh of Rutherglen, was to be chosen by the bailies and council of Glasgow, receiving institution from the Provost of the Collegiate Church.[9]

9. Prebend of Saint Nicholas.

The revenue of the ninth prebend, that of Saint Andrew the Apostle, was derived from property within the city. The bailies and council had the right of presentation; the Provost of the College, that of admission.[1]

10. Prebend of Saint Andrew.

The two prebends, next in order, owed their foundation to Sir Martyn Reid, chaplain at the altar of Saint Christopher in the High Kirk of Glasgow. Both were endowed with the rents of tenements within the city or its territory; and the patronage of both was assigned to the bailies and council, the admission of the persons presented being reserved to the Provost of the Church. The one prebend, that which ranked as the tenth on the foundation, was called after the Name of Jesus; the other, being the eleventh, had the style of Saint Martin. The possessors of both were required to make prayers for the souls of the founder and of his parents, and to observe all the duties generally enjoined on the other canons.[2]

13. Prebend of the Three Choristers.

The twelfth prebend was that of the Three Choristers. Its revenues were to be divided equally among its possessors: and of these, one was to be chosen by the bailies and council of the city, and two, by the Provost of the College; by whom all three were to be instituted, after diligent examination of their qualifications made by the prebendaries of the church. The youths were to be well and carefully instructed by the third prebendary, or Master of the Song School, in the Gregorian chant,[3]

[2] Pp. 38–42.

[3] The ancient Gregorian chant would appear at this time to have been falling into desuetude in Scotland. We have an edifying complaint of the innovation in an interesting and rare work (for the use of which I am indebted to Dr. Smith of Cruthorland) by a Canon Regular of the abbies of Scone and Cambuskenneth: "Hoc plane est contra istos qui nouas introducunt Missas peculiares iuxta suas phantasias factas. Ita fit, ut alius aliam uelit cantari: hinc turbationes et rixae in Domini seruitio oriuntur, cum alter alterius opus uilipendit, aut in missa, aut in tono, uoce, aut notis, semper uicium inueniens. Sic bonum ocium uanis rebus conterunt, nec bonas literas unquam attingunt. Vtinam sic ruminarent Nouum Testamentum et Bibliam, et in his certarent cum saecularibus perinde ut in uanis somnijs. Nihil enim prodest concentus cantus, si non sit concentus charitatis et dilectionis. Quid enim conducit uoce conuenire, si mente discrepes? Haud facile possum dicere, sed scio, et in his canticis Augustinum fleuisse, nec Beniamin adolescentulum in excessu mentis fuisse. Quare in nullo loco Gallorum religiosorum, nec in multis etiam saecularium collegijs, hoc genus cantandi exercetur. Interfui enim cum Uesperae celebrarentur in praecipuo Galliarum collegio Parisijs, quod Nostrae Dominae dicitur: ubi Dux Albaniae regni Scotiae per id tempus princeps, et primus Parrhisiorum praeses, uiri amplissimi, aderant in sacrosancta Assumptionis die. Nec alio quam Gregoriano cantu pontifices, qui rem diuinam faciebant, ad Magnificat usi sunt. Et in ecclesia Senonensi quae est Galliarum et Germaniae antiquitus ecclesia primitialis extitit, nunquam nisi cantus Gregorianus admittitur in choro. . . . They were to be removed, at the sight of the Provost and canons, on becoming disqualified for their office by the breaking of their voices; but provision was made by the Founder for their subsequent maintenance for two years, at the Grammar School.[4]

Commons of the Prebendaries.

Two acres of land in the Mylhill, and sundry tenements within the burgh, were set apart as a common fund, to be administered for the general behoof of the College by the Provost, and by two procurators chosen yearly among the canons in their chapter at Pentecost. In consideration of these "commons," and of the emoluments arising from the obsequies and obits celebrated within the church, the prebendaries were bound to say three masses in each week for the souls of the Founder, his parents and benefactors, and of all the faithful departed. On every Monday, they were to say a mass of Requiem; on Tuesday, a mass of Saint Anne the mother of the Blessed Virgin; and on Wednesday, one of the masses of Our Lady, "missam de Compassione Beatissimae Mariae Virginis." At each mass there were to be present, beside the officiating prebendary, a deacon, the three choristers, and two other canons, who, at the close of the service, were to repair to the Founder's tomb, and there say the

The good Brother Robert seems, however, to have had a quarrel with music altogether: "Nunquam noui," he exclaims, in another place, "nec a quocunque hactenus audiui uirum in cantu plus satis eruditum, quin semel aut pluries poenituerit ante mortem. Audeo dicere, quod non excluderetur a tot egregijs locis, sicut quodammodo a toto orbe, exceptis Scotia et Anglia, si in multo fuisset probus: sed quaeso, quomodo cantabunt isti modo superexaltati in saecula, cum uenerit mortis hora? quando totus ipse homo pallescit, pedes frigescunt, infirmae manus nigrescunt, uultus discoloratur, oculi tenebrescunt et profundantur et euertuntur, pili labuntur, frons obduratur, membra cuncta frigescunt, mentum ruit, labia infrigidantur, os contrahitur, caprizat pulsus, halitus abscedit, undique sunt puncturae mortis aculeum usque ad cor, quod est ultimum moriens sicut primum uiuens, imprimentis." Master of Work.

Both the College itself, and the houses bequeathed for its endowment, were to be kept in good repair, in roofs, windows, and walls ("in tegulis, vitro, lye poyntyng"), at the sight of the bailies of the city, under the care of a Master of Work, to be chosen, from the number of the prebendaries, in their yearly chapter at Whitsunday.[7]

Visiters of the College.

The strict observance of the Foundation was anxiously provided for. The Dean of the cathedral chapter, with one of the canons of the metropolitan church to be elected by him, and the Rector, with the Dean of the Faculty of Arts, of the University, were appointed Visiters of the College, receiving payments for their service, and armed with power to correct the faults of the members by summoning them before the Provost, in the first instance, or, in the event of his failing to enforce amendment, then before the Dean and chapter of the High Kirk; the punishment of any prebendary guilty of incontinence being reserved to the ordinary of the diocese and his commissaries.[8] Four visitations were to be made in every Provisions against the same sin occur in almost every contemporary deed of a like kind; and while, as it has been observed, they furnish unquestionable proof of the general "depravity of the priesthood" at that time, it should be remembered that they afford equal evidence of the existence of an earnest desire, on the part of the better members of the church herself, to amend the prevailing immorality. I may refer any one who wishes to follow the traces, which present themselves in so many quarters, of a party within the Scotish church zealous for her old faith and observances, but equally zealous for a reform in the lives and manners of her clergy, to a remarkable tract (I believe of great rarity) printed at Paris in the summer of 1540, with the following title: "Ad Illustriss. Tit. S. Stephani in monte Cœlio Cardinalem, D. Dauidem Betoun, Primatem Scotiæ, Archiepiscopum S. Andreæ, Episco. year, namely, on the first Tuesday in Lent, on the second day of May, on the first Tuesday in August, and on the first day of December.[9]

The Yearly Obsequies of the Founder.

The order to be observed in the yearly obsequies of the Founder, is prescribed with great minuteness.[1] Firstly, on every Feast of Saint Anne (the twenty-sixth of July), all the eleven prebendaries of the College, with the three choristers, were to assemble between the hours of three and four in the afternoon, to sing "Placebo"[2] and "Dirige,"[3] to read the nine lessons (from the book of Job) appointed in the Office for the Departed, to say the Psalm "De Profundis," and the accustomed prayers and collects. This ended, three shillings were to be distributed among them, in bread and ale. On the morrow, each prebendary was to celebrate a mass of Requiem, when eleven shillings were to be divided equally among the canons, and each chorister was to have four pennies. Secondly, thirty of the poor, old men and matrons, were to be gathered in, both to the obsequies on Saint Anne's day, and to the mass on the morrow, taking their place on a wooden bench in the middle of the choir set apart for the images and wax lights, and receiving, each of them, three pennies in wheaten bread, three pennies in flesh or fish, and two pennies for ale. Thirdly, along with

"Trop mieulx sont traictez," says the preceptor of Gargantua, "les forcez entre les Maures et Tartares, les meurtriers en la prison criminelle, voyre certes les chiens en vostre maison, que ne sont les malauctruz on dict colliege." It was used as the anthem at the beginning of Vespers, in the Vigils (or non-sacrificial Service) for the Departed, and so gave name to the whole of that office.

[3] "Dirige Domine Deus meus in conspectu tuo viam meam," the anthem with which Matins began in the Vigils for the Departed. It is taken from the ninth verse of the fifth Psalm.

"A Dirige autem (ut videtur) originem duxit Anglicum Dirge, id est nænia." (Portiforii seu Breviarii Sarisburiensis Fasciculus Primus, p. xxxviii. Lond. 1843.).

these, eight poor scholars were to be present, to say either the Seven Penitential Psalms, or the Rosary of the Blessed Virgin Mary,[4] with the Psalm "De Profundis," and the usual collects; and to each scholar were to be given two pennies. Fourthly, the poor of both chambers of the Hospital of Saint Nicholas beside the Cathedral, were to be invited as well to the obsequies as to the mass, during which they were to repeat the Rosary of Our Lady; and four shillings were to be divided equally among those present, or detained in the Almshouse by their infirmity. Fifthly, the lepers of Saint Ninian's Hospital at the south end of the bridge over the Clyde, were to assemble in the cemetery of the College, there to offer up prayers to God; and among them twelve pennies were to be doled. Sixthly, Saint Mungo's bell[5] was to be tolled through the city, both on [4] The devotion of the Rosary of Our Lady consists in the recital of fifteen Pater Nosters, and a hundred and fifty Ave Marias. Its origin has afforded matter for a learned controversy, of which brief notices may be seen in the reverend Alban Butler's Lives of the Saints, (4 Aug. and 1 Oct.). The Apostolic See appears to have ruled, that the devotion (which was for the use chiefly of the more illiterate) was instituted by Saint Dominic, in the thirteenth century. (Breviarium Romanum ex decreto SS. Concilii Tridentini restitutum; Prop. Sanct., Dominica prima Octobris, in Solemnitate SS. Rosarii B. V. Mariae.).

Saint Mungo's Bell.

[5] This bell, which the great Apostle of Strathclyde was believed to have brought with him from Rome, was long held in much veneration at Glasgow. It is repeatedly mentioned in the following sheets (pp. 51, 52, 177, 196, 203, 209.), as well as in the Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis (vol. ii. pp. 314, 406, 416, 419, 523, 539, 552.); and allusion to it occurs, more than once, in the ancient offices for the festival of the Saint. Thus, one of the anthems appointed for his day in the Breviary of Aberdeen:

"Visitat alma pii vite septena loca Petri Presul campana cui seruit in ethere sacra."

(Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. i. p. xciv.). Again, another hymn, which Mr. Innes conjectures to be of the fifteenth century:

"Romam visit septies: papa quem honorat
Ut seruiret presuli: avi se decorat
Et campanam sustinet: que sonos dulcorat."

(Id. p. xcix.) The life of Saint Mungo, written by Jocelin of Furnes in the twelfth century, and edited by Pinkerton, has a chapter "Quod Sanctus Kentegernus septies Romam adierit; que Beatum Gregorium de statu suo consulerit;" and though no express mention is here made of the bell, we may be allowed to suppose that it was meant to be included among the "multa sanctorum pignora, et ecclesiae ornamenta, et cetera quae ad decorem domus Dei pertinuerunt," which the bishop is said to have received from the hands of the sainted successor of Saint Peter. (Vitae Antiquae Sanctorum Scotiae, pp. 255–257. Lond. 1789.). The bell of Saint Kentigern was one of the few memorials of the old worship which escaped the wreck of the Reformation. In the accounts of the city treasurer

Saint Anne's day, and on the morrow; the bells of the College were to be rung, and images and wax lights were to be set out in the choir; and for

for the year 1578, there is a charge of two shillings "for ane tong to Sanct Mungowis bell." (Burgh Records of the City of Glasgow, MDLXXIII.—MDLXXXI., p. 104.). An author, who is not however of the best credit, affirms that the relic survived even the beginning of the reign of King Charles I.: "Glascuensis ciuitas pro stemmate habet salmonem huiusmodi, necnon et campanam (quae in hodiernum vsque diem a Glascuensibus asseruatur) qua vir Dei vtebatur." (Davidis Camerarii De Scotorvm Fortitvdine Doctrina et Pietate, p. 83. Paris. 1631.). This is the latest trace of Saint Mungo's bell which has occurred to me: it may have perished in the destruction of "superstitious monuments" which was made not long afterwards, when (as we learn from the Kirk Session Register) the reforming ardour of the year 1641 busied itself in effacing from the walls of the cathedral the last lingering inscription of · sancte · quintigerne · ora · pro · nobis ·

The devotion felt for the "campana Sancti Kentigerni" was not the only instance of that kind of observance which obtained in Scotland. The Breviary of Aberdeen commemorates a certain bell, "quoddam tintinnabulum," which Pope Gregory the Great presented to Saint Ternan the Apostle of the Picts. (Breuiar. Aberdon., Prop. Sanct., xij. Junii.). It was preserved, with many other relics of the saint, at the church which was built over his grave at Banchory on the northern Dee; and legal deeds of the fifteenth century are extant to show the importance which was attached even to the custody of "the bell of Sanct Ternen callit the Ronecht." (Registrum Recentius Cenobii de Aberbrothoc, MS. Bibl. Adv. Edinb.; Registrum Episcopatus Aberdonensis, vol. i. pp. 327, 328.). Ronecht was, perhaps, a name generally given to bells brought from the Eternal City. (See Illustrations of the Topography and Antiquities of the shires of Aberdeen and Banff, p. 258. Aberdeen, 1846.). The "sacra campana Sancti Kessogii," and the "sacra campana Sancti Lolani" were included among the feudal investitures of the Earldom of Perth so lately as the year 1675. (Inqvisitionvm ad capellam Domini Regis retornatarvm Abbreviatio, inquisit. special. vicecomit. Perth. nn. 708, 880, 1094. Edinb. 1811.). In days still more recent we are told how the bell of Saint Fillan in Glendochart, "that was in high reputation among the votaries of that saint in old times, has for some years past been locked up, to prevent its being used to superstitious purposes." (Statistical Account of Scotland, vol. xvii. pp. 377, 378. Edinb. 1796.).

Saint Mungo's Bell.

Giraldus Cambrensis may be cited to show that, in the twelfth century, the superstitious veneration of bells was general, not only in Scotland, but in Ireland and Wales. "Hoc etiam non praetereundum puto," he says "quod campanas baiulas, baculosque Sanctorum in superiore parte recuruos, auro et argento vel aere contectos, in magna reuerentia tam Hiberniae et Scotiae quam et Gwalliae populus et clerus habere solent: ita vt sacramenta super haec longe magis, quam super Euangelia, et praestare vereantur et peierare," (Topographia Hiberniae, part. iii. cap. xxxiii., apud Anglica, Hibernica, Normannica, Cambrica, a veteribvs Scripta ex bibliotheca Gvilielmi Camdeni, p. 747. Francof. 1602.). In the same work (part. ii. cap. xxxiii. p. 729), he commemorates the miraculous bell of Saint Finian at Clonard in Leinster; and in another, he records the marvellous powers of a bell preserved in the church of Glascum at Eleuein in Wales: "campana baiula virtuosissima, quam proprio vocabulo Bangu vocant, quae et Sancti Dauid fuisse perhibetur." (Itinerarium Cambriae, lib. i. capp. i., ii. pp. 822, 825.; Cambriae Descriptio, cap. xviii. p. 891.).

Saint Mungo's bell, though every trace of its story appears to have long vanished from the popular memory, still survives in the armorial ensigns of the city, where it has been enshrined for more than five centuries. We discover it in the earliest notice which has been preserved of the burgh seal, the description, by Father Thomas Innes of the Scotish College at Paris, of a charter of the year 1293, which is now lost: "Huic carte appensa erant duo sigilla, quorum primum, scilicet sigillum communitatis Glasguensis, exhibet superius caput episcopi et inferius tintinabulum; alterum vero amissum est." (Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. i. p. cxxvi. not. g.). We see it figured on the seal of the city which is still attached to a deed (printed below, p. 237, no. iiii.) of the year 1325, and has been engraved both in the Liber Sancte Marie de Melros, t. ii. plate VI. no. 3. Edinb. 1837, and in the Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, plate V. no. 3. An impression from this seal, which continued in use until the Reformation, is included in the interesting collection of casts of Glasgow seals presented to the members of the Maitland Club, in the year 1832, by their secretary, Dr. Smith of Crutherland. Saint Mungo's bell may be recognised also on the privy seal of the chapter used in the year 1321 (Liber S. Marie de Melros, t. ii. plate V. no. 2; Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, plate II. no. 2.); as well as on the seal of cause of the same body used from the year 1488 to the year 1540 (Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, plate VI. no. 5.); on the latest chapter seal known to have existed (Id. plate VI. no. 10.); and on the seal of the officiality, used in the year 1533, and probably as early as the close of the thirteenth century, (Id. plate VI. no. 9.).

I need not stay here to explain "the fish and the ring," which appear (along with the mitred effigy of Saint Kentigern, and his consecrated bell) on the burgh seal of the year 1325, and may be seen on seals of the bishops at a still earlier period. They are intelligible emblems of a well-known miracle which occupies a prominent place in every memorial of the Saint. Cf. Pinkert. Vit. Antiq. SS. Scotiae, pp. 273–277; Regist. Episc. Glasg., vol. i. pp. xcii., xcix.; D. Camerarii de Scot. Fortitvd., pp. 82, 83, in verbis cuiusdam fragmenti seu manuscripti quod ex antiqua Archiepiscopali Glascuensi bibliotheca habuit; Abp. Spottiswoode's Hist. of the Church and State of Scot., p. 112. Lond. 1677.

But I may be permitted to offer one or two remarks on the less generally understood tokens of "the bird" and "the tree." These too are represented on the seal of the municipal community in the year 1325, as well as on many of the ancient seals of the episcopal see.

The bird is obviously the little favourite of Saint Serf, the "avicula, quae vulgo ob ruborem corpusculi Rubisca nuncupatur," the tale of whose miraculous restoration to life by Saint Kentigern, fills the fifth chapter of his Acts by Jocelin (Pinkert. Vit. Antiq. SS. Scotiae, pp. 208–210.), and is duly commemorated also in the second lesson appointed for his festival in the Breviary of Aberdeen, (Regist. Episc. Glasg. vol. i. p. xc.). Long after this legend was wholly forgotten, it was remembered that the bird exhibited in the arms of the city was a red-breast, as we learn from the inscription which Dr. Robert Magnus has prefixed to his epigram on the Insignia civitatis Glasguae: "Salmo, quercus, cui insidet rubecula avis, campana, et annulus aureus salmonis ore exortus." (Artvri Ionstoni Poemata Omnia, p. 434. Middelb. Zeland. 1642.).

The "tree," in the older seals, takes the form rather of a branch; and is doubtless meant to commemorate the frozen bough of hazel which Saint Kentigern miraculously kindled into flame, as related in the third lesson prescribed for his feast in the Aberdeen Breviary, (Regist. Episc.

chosen for that purpose yearly, by his brethren, on the Feast of Saint Martin in winter; and he was to take to himself, for his fee, twenty pennies.

Glasg., vol. i. p. xc.). The Cistercian of Furnes devotes the sixth chapter of his book to the same tradition: "De igne per invidiam a sociis Sancti Kentegerni extincto, et flatu ejus celitus in ramusculo corili dato." (Pinkert. Vit. Antiq. SS. Scotiae, pp. 210–212.). He adds, that the supernatural power which was put forth on this occasion, had not altogether ceased to manifest itself even in his own day: "Corilus enim illa, de qua ramusculus scissus est, benedictionem a Sancto Kentegerno accepit, quae postmodum in nemusculum silvescere cepit. Si vero de corileto illo, ut patriotae dicunt, ramusculus etiam viridissimus assumptus fuerit, quasi aridissimum quid ad tactum ignis quodammodo lambentis, usque in hodiernum diem ignem suscepit, et modico afflatu pulsatus per meritum Sancti igneam comam ex se spargit."

We meet with the original miracle (together with those of the resuscitation of the tame robin of the Apostle of the Orkneys, and the recovery, in the fish's mouth, of the lost ring of the frail Queen of Caidyow) in the Sequentia or hymn for the feast of Saint Kentigern in the Missal presented by the Knight of Arbuthnott, in the year 1492, to the church which he had founded in honour of the first bishop of the Picts:

"Garrit ales pernecatus
. . . . .
Ardent rami congelati
Sacro flatu inflammati
. . . . .
Mecha merens confortatur
Regi reconciliatur
Dum in fluctu qui jactatur
Piscis profert annulum."

(Liber Ecclesie Sancti Terenani de Arbuthnot, MS. penes Dominum Vicecomitem de Arbuthnott.). According to this venerable record of the traditions of the Scotish church, Saint Mungo was baptized by the hands of Saint Palladius. Thus, the hymn for the festival of that bishop and confessor (whom the collect commemorates as "Scotorum populo primum Apostolum et Doctorem catholice fidei") recites:

Arms of the City o Glasgow.

"Scotis fidem predicauit:
Terenanum baptizauit
Presulem sanctissimum.
Kentigernum fonte lauit:
Et Seruanum ordinauit
Suum suffraganeum."

I fear that the motto, LET GLASGOW FLOURISH BY THE PREACHING OF THE WORD, which now accompanies the armorial bearings of the city, cannot be traced to any very remote period; else for this, likewise, a fanciful origin might, perhaps, be suggested in the legend that tells how Saint Kentigern, having appointed Saint Asaph to the rule of the see in Wales, which still bears that disciple's name, was warned of an angel that he himself should again go down to Glasgow; how King Redrath, with his chiefs and a great multitude of people, went out to welcome the returning prophet; how he began to preach to them the word of God, but from the press and throng could neither be seen nor heard save by the few who stood nearest by; and how, of a sudden, the earth on which he stood miraculously upheaved itself into a knoll, so that all the assembled thousands both beheld his countenance and heard his words. The story is in the liturgy which good Bishop Elphinstone (himself born and bred within the patrimony of Saint Mungo) compiled for the use of his church of Aberdeen (Regist. Episc. Glasg. vol. i. p. xciii.); and the record adds, that a chapel dedicated to the honour of the Saint was erected on the spot: "Et dum eisdem predicaret verbum Dei a parua parte populi visus est nec sermo eius auditus est. Vnde nutu divino terra supra quam stetit se in monticulum eleuauit ita ut ab

Other Obits to be celebrated annually.

Beside the obsequies of the Founder, commemorations were appointed by him to be made yearly, on the last day of May, for the soul of his mother, Jonet Lundy, who died on the thirteenth of June, 1529; on the twenty-first of September, for the soul of George Montgomery, rector of Eglesham and canon of Glasgow,[6] whose decease happened on the same day and in the same year with that of the Founder's mother; and for the soul of Adam Colquhoun,[7] rector of Stobo (in the deanery of Peebles) and canon of Glasgow, who departed on the seventh of February, 1541–2.[8]

Duties of the prebendaries generally.

It was required that all the prebendaries on the Foundation should be in priest's, or, at least, in deacon's orders; that they should make residence in person at the College; that they should daily say Matins, High Mass, omni populo videretur et eius predicacio audiretur vbi insignis capella in eius honore juxta Glasgu dedicata est." The allusion, I presume, is to the chapel of Saint Mungo without the Walls (called also Little Saint Mungo's), the traces of which were visible about a hundred years ago, on the eminence called The Dowhill, on the north side of the Gallowgate, immediately without the Port, on the eastern bank of the rivulet which witnessed the meeting of Saint Columba and Saint Kentigern in the sixth century, and was known, at least as early as the twelfth, by the name of The Molendinar, which it still bears. (Pinkert. Vit. Antiq. SS. Scotiae, p. 282.). The chapel was built and endowed, in the year 1500, by David Cunynghame, archdeacon of Argyll, provost of the Collegiate Church of Hamilton, and Official General of Glasgow, (Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. ii. pp. 501, 502.). We learn from the deed of foundation that certain trees which stood beside it, then retained the name of Saint Kentigern; and in the subsequent Register of Our Lady College (p. 27), mention is made of a spring in the same neighbourhood which was called Saint Mungo's Well.

Chapel of Saint Mungo without the Walls; or Little Saint Mungo's Kirk.

I must add, however, that Jocelin's Life of the Saint gives the scene of this famous miracle to a place called Holdelin, which would seem to have been at some distance from Glasgow, (Vitae Antiquae Sanctorum Scotiae, pp. 266, 269.). Perhaps, Hoddam, in Annandale, may be meant.

[6] He appears as rector of the University of Glasgow in the year 1509, (pp. 209, 210.).

[7] This ecclesiastic is commemorated as the founder of a chaplainry, in the cathedral church, in honour of Saint Thomas the Martyr. He was elected rector of the University of Glasgow in the year 1517, and again in the year 1524. Among those who were incorporated members of the University under his rule in the former year, we find the well known author of the De Gestis Scotorum: "egregius vir," as the record styles him, "magister Johannes Maioris doctor Parisiensis ac principalis regens collegii et pedagogii dicte vniuersitatis canonicusque capelle regie ac vicarius de Dunlop." (Annales Universitatis Glasguensis 1451–1556, MS.).

After the second mass, on all the greater festivals, the officiating priest was to repair to the Founder's tomb, in alb and stole, and there to say the Psalm "De Profundis," with the ordinary collects, and sprinkling of holy water. The whole members were very earnestly exhorted to observe a grave and reverend demeanour,[9] and to perform the [9] Even among the regular clergy in Scotland, there seems, about this time, to have been cause to complain of levity or irreverence during the services of the church. "Sunt nonnulli," writes the monk of Cambuskenneth, "diaboli nimirum praestigiis delusi, qui cum diuinis intersunt, onus se ferre grauius Ethna estimant. Fines were prescribed as a punishment for absence and other offences;[1] and for the better enforcement of discipline, a chapter of the whole College was appointed to be held on every Saturday, according to the rule and customs of the metropolitan church.[2]

History of the College.

Not many years elapsed between the erection of Our Lady College, and the memorable event of the Reformation; and of its history during the interval nothing is known, beyond the meagre facts, that its first Provost sedilia quasi urticarum sedes uidentur: ita enim uigilantissimus et assiduissimus humani generis hostis interiora mouet, et posteriora stimulat, et sic orationis fructus amittitur." (Fratris Roberti Richardini Exegesis in Canonem Diui Augustini, foll. 73, 74.).

The same writer inveighs against the desecration of many kinds by which even conventual churches were profaned in that age: "Male ergo quidam fratres faciunt, qui a mulieribus in templo pannum lineum mercari solent." (fol. 78.). "Nec probanda est consuetudo, ubi iudicia exercentur, ubi omnium fiunt conuentus uirorum et mulierum ad transigendas lites in templo: nec etiam ubi rationes redditiuum redduntur, et decimarum in Pascha: tunc enim rixae, iuramenta, et infinita alia crimina committuntur. Hisce tamen temporibus in diuorum aris suas pecunias numerant, quod sine multis uerbis ociosis fieri nequit. . . . . Conceditur tamen aliquando, uenia impetrata, rationabili de causa in templo comedere, bibere, et cibare: utpote cum longe distat ab urbe, nec sero artificibus illic laborantibus redire in aedes suas liceat. Occurrunt etiam nonnulli furore perciti, qui licite ut salutem recuperent ecclesiae columnis alligantur: utpote in illo sanctissimo et religiosissimo collegio Domini de Borthik (regni regisque studiosissimi in Scotia, litium et rixarum fugitantissimo, in pauperes uero animo benignissimo) ubi Deus Optimus Maximus propter Sanct Kentierni sui confessoris merita, compluribus hominibus auxilium illius implorantibus opem salutemque affert." (foll. 77, 78.). The Collegiate Church here referred to, is that which was founded in the year 1449, by William Lord Crichton, the famous chancellor of King James II., beside his castle of Crichton, in the parish of Borthwick (anciently called Louchwhoruir or Locherwert), in the deanery of Lothian. (Sir Walter Scott's Provincial Antiquities of Scotland, pp. 194–197. edit. Edinb. 1834; Liber Cartarum Prioratus Sancti Andree in Scotia, p. 30. Edinb. 1841.). It was dedicated to Saint Kentigern (Crawfurd's Lives of the Officers of the Crown and of the State of Scotland, p. 30), of whom it is related in the history of his Acts by Jocelin of Furnes, that he here wrought a signal miracle: "Aliam quoque crucem incredibilem dictu, nisi posset explorari visu et tactu, in Lothwerwerd, juste et religiose de resurrectione cogitans, de sola arena maris construxit. In quo loco ipse octo annorum spacio mansit. . . . Ad hanc etiam crucem plures variis languoribus gravati, et maxime furiosi et a daemonio vexati, ad vesperum vinciuntur; et mane, multociens sani et incolumes inventi, ad sua libere revertuntur." (Vitae Antiquae Sanctorum Scotiae, p. 287.).

was Christopher Boyd, vicar of Dalry,[3] and its last, Archibald Crawfurd, rector of Eglesham,[4] the same person, apparently, who is mentioned in the will of the Founder, as "his most dear friend." For some time after the great ecclesiastical revolution which was consummated in the year 1560, the revenues of the church would appear to have been enjoyed by the surviving prebendaries.[5] As these died out, the endowments gradually fell into the hands of the municipal corporation of the city; and seem, in no long time, to have been applied, wholly or in part, to its common and secular purposes. In the year 1598, the right and possession of the burgh were challenged by Sir Patrick Houstoun of that Ilk, knight, on the assumption that the Founder had established a provision by which the lands and rents of the College, in the event of their being diverted from their proper destination, should "pertene and returne to the Laird of Houstoun and his airis for evir, but forder proces or pley." No such clause, however, was to be found in the Foundation;

There is a charter granted, which is yet to be seen, by 'Archibaldus Crawfurd prepositus Ecclesiae Beatae Mariae infra muros civitatis Glasguensis,' with consent of the community and council, patrons thereof, of a tenement in the Gallowgate, 'Gulielmo Maxwell civi dicti burgi Glasguensis,' anno 1566." (M'Ure's View of the City of Glasgow, p. 59; edit. 1831.; Chalmers' Caledonia, vol. iii. p. 654, citing the Privy Seal Register, vol. xxxv. fol. 21.). Mr. Chalmers has more than once confounded the Collegiate Church of Saint Mary and Saint Anne with the Crypt of the Cathedral.

Crawfurd, who seems to have conformed to the new ecclesiastical establishment, survived the year 1580. (Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. ii. p. 588.).

The Trongate.

[7] I have not observed the occurrence of the name of "The Tron Gate" before the middle of the sixteenth century, that is about sixty years after King James IV. (by his charter of the fourth of January 1489–90) granted to the Bishop of Glasgow, and his successors, the privilege of having a free tron in their city: "liberam facultatem et potestatem et libertatem quod fieri faciant habeant teneant et possideant liberum tronum in dicta civitate pro perpetuo ac constituant et ordinent custumarium tronatorem et clericum cokkete in eadem vt omnes mercancie et bona civibus et tenentibus civitatis et baronie de Glasgu pertinentia ibidem tronentur ponderentur et custumentur." (Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. ii. p. 467.). In a deed of seisin of the thirtieth of May 1545, a tenement is described as being "in le Troyne Gait ex parte australi eiusdem," (MS. in archivis Alme Universitatis Glasguensis; Blackh. Invent. no. 251.). In the following sheets (pp. 3, 7, 131, 132.), the name of "lie Troyngait" is given, in writings of the year 1549, to the same street which, less than twenty years previously, was called Saint Thenaw's Gate. In the Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, the name of "Troingait" first occurs on the third of October 1553, (vol. ii. p. 580.).

Saint Thenaw's Gate.

The street derived its older name, by which it was known at least as early as the year 1426 (see below p. 244), from a chapel situated near its western extremity, dedicated to Saint Thenaw, the mother of Saint Kentigern. The Breviary of Aberdeen (which was printed in 1509) assures us that this devout lady died and was buried at Glasgow (Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. i. p. xcviii.); and we have the express authority of a royal declaration in the previous century for believing that this chapel was built over her sepulchre. King James III., by a charter dated on the fourteenth of October 1475, bequeathed to the cathedral church of Glasgow half a stone of wax, from the lands of Odingstoune in the lordship of Bothwell, for lights to be burned at the tomb of Saint Tenew, in the chapel where her bones were buried: "dimidiam petram cere fiendam et distribuendam super sepultura dicte Sancte Tenew ac constructione super eadem sepultura facta in capella vbi ossa hujusmodi Sancte requiescunt." (Id. vol. ii. pp. 426–428.). Another deed, of the year 1498, makes mention also of the "capella ubi ossa Beate Thanew matris beati confessoris Kentigerni requiescunt prope civitatem Glasguensem." (Id. vol. ii. pp. 497–499.). We learn, however, from a catalogue of the relics in the treasury of the cathedral in the year 1432, that at least some of the bones of Saint Thenaw were kept there along with the remains of her distinguished son: "Item duo sacculi linei cum ossibus Sancti Kentigerni Sancte Tenaw et aliorum diuersorum sanctorum." (Id. vol. ii. p. 330.).

Saint Thenaw's Chapel survived the year 1597; and some traces of it were to be found even so recently as the beginning of the last century. Wodrow records that it was then called "Saint Tennoch's;" a name which, in the mouths of a people more familiar with the Prophets of the Antediluvian World than with the Saints of the Dark Ages, was in no long time changed into that of "Saint Enoch," now given to a church ancient name of Saint Thenaw's Gate. No memorial either of the form or size of the edifice has been preserved: we know only that it was surrounded by a burying ground,[8] and that on the west side of it stood the Song School. For more than a quarter of a century after the Reformation, the church lay waste; but, about the year 1592, it began to be again frequented as a place of worship. Its history, from that period to the close of the seventeenth century, may be traced in the copious extracts from the Registers of the Kirk Session of Glasgow, which have been preserved by Wodrow in his inedited "Life of Mr David Weemes."[9] It and square, not far from the site of the edifice which marked the resting place of the royal matron who gave birth to the Apostle of Cumbria.

Saint Thenaw lent her name also to a spring and a streamlet in the neighbourhood of her church. (Burgh Records of the City of Glasgow, MDLXXIII.—MDLXXXI., p. 5; Memorabilia of the City of Glasgow, MDLXXXVIII.—MDCCL., p. 239.). I have been told that, within the memory of man, Saint Thenaw's Well was not unfrequently resorted to with feelings in which devotion might claim to hold a part.

Saint Thenaw's Gate was the site of other two chapels, the one dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, the other to Saint Thomas of Canterbury, archbishop and martyr.

Saint Mary's, or Our Lady Chapel, stood on the north side of the street, not far from the Market Cross. Its existence can be traced as far back as the year 1293. It would seem to have fallen into ruin after the beginning of the sixteenth century. See below, pp. 87, 117, 244; Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. i. p. 210, vol. ii. p. 452.

We have record of the Chapel of Saint Thomas a Becket, in the year 1320, when Sir Walter Fitz Gilbert, the progenitor of the Hamiltons, bequeathed to the cathedral a suit of vestments for a priest, deacon, and subdeacon, under provision that they might be borrowed, if required, four times in every year for the service of Saint Mary's chapel at Machan, and twice yearly for the use of the chapel of Saint Thomas the Martyr at Glasgow, namely, on the festival of his commemoration, being the fourth day after Christmass, and on the feast of his translation, being the seventh of July. (Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. i. pp. 227, 228.). Mention is made of the building in the year 1505. See below, p. 258.

The erection of a Nunnery, dedicated to Saint Catherine of Sienna, was contemplated in the neighbourhood of Saint Thenaw's Chapel; but it does not appear that any measure was taken towards the execution of the design, beyond a bequest by Roland Blacader, subdean of Glasgow, of the sum of three hundred pounds. See Appendix to the Preface, No. I.

"From the Reformation till 1592, there seems only to have been preaching in the High Church or Cathedrall. Then there is mention of the New Kirk, now the Trone or Laigh Kirk. A Reader is spoken of in the records, 15 June, 1592. The first collection recorded to be made at it, is on 31 October, 1594; and then, as I take it, Mr John Bell began to preach in it. And after that, the records afterwards still mention two collections. There is mention of the steeple of the New Kirk, on 21 December, 1598; and a meeting in the bell-house there, on 9 May, 1650.

"14 February, 1599. The session appoints as much cloath of green to be bought as will cover the pulpit of the New Kirk, with fringes and other things needfull.

"11 December, 1595. The Bible in the New Kirk that the Reader reads on, is declared to belong to the kirk and session.

"31 May, 1599. Another Bible is bought for the New Kirk.

"27 May, 1647. Pillars and a place of publick repentance are appointed to be made in the New Kirk and Blackfriars, and that the council be applied to for erecting of them.

"3 May, 1604. An intimation ordered in the New Kirk, that all the women sit together in that kirk.

"1595. That Prayers be read in the High Kirk at seven in the morning, and at five at even in the New Church, till winter approach.

"13 July, 1613. That Prayers be every Wednesday morning in the Tronegate Kirk.

"5 Aprile, 1621. The session appoints the New Kirk door to be opened at five hours in the morning, and closed at nine at night, for the summer half year; and, for the winter, from seven in the morning till five in the evening. This (like the Old Kirk at Edinburgh) was for particular persons praying in the Kirk.

"13 November, 1645. The session appoints two dayes catechizing in the week, Munday and Friday, at half eight in the morning in the New Kirk.

"26 May, 1631. The session appoints, with the consent of the magistrates, that partys to be proclaimed shall come on Sundays night after the evening prayer, to the New Kirk, there to be booked, and a minister and some elders to wait on for that purpose."

The "Memorabilia of the City of Glasgow" supply the following notice:

"25 March, 1665. The same day the beddelship of the Laigh Kirk in Trongait, is conferred wpon and given to James Smith merchand; and he is not onlie to be carfull anent the ringing of the belles, but also he is to walk throw the kirk in tyme of divyne service, with ane whyt staff in his hand, as wont to be of old, for the crubbing of bairnes and wthirs that maks disturbance in the kirk, and for impeiding of all abuses therin," (p. 256.).

The second place in the volume is occupied by THE CHARTERS OF THE FRIARS PREACHERS OF GLASGOW, of the rule of Saint Dominic, often styled also THE BLACK FRIARS, from the colour of their habit. At the Reformation, the muniments of this Convent, together with the greater portion of the conventual buildings and property, passed to the neighbouring University; and from its archives they are now printed, with the addition of one or two deeds, copies of which have been preserved elsewhere.[2]

ii. The Muniments of the Friars Preachers.

The institute of the Preaching Brethren, founded about the year 1205, and formally approved by the Apostolic See in the year 1216, spread itself throughout Western Christendom with unexampled speed. It appealed to the favour of the multitude not less by its zeal, learning, and devotion, and its stern self-denial in renouncing all worldly possessions, trusting wholly for support to the voluntary alms of the faithful, than by the vehemence with which its members inveighed against the clergy of the church, and all other religious societies, by the confidence with which they boasted themselves the only ministers who proclaimed "the gospel," and by the enthusiastic eloquence and flattering doctrine of their sermons, which, delivered in the fields and on the streets and by the waysides, were went to ruin, till the community repaired it in the year 1592; and as the city increased in trade and inhabitants, they enlarged the church, and added many different isles to it towards the high street, all of ashler work, and built a handsome steeple or spear before it, but not adjoining to the church, in the year 1637. At the bottom of the steeple there is a trone, or a place for weighing of goods." (View of the City of Glasgow, p. 59.).

[2] One or two of the muniments, unfortunately, appear to have been lost at some time after they came into the keeping of the University. "The Inventar of the euidentis lettres gudis and geir perteining to the college of Glasgow the viij day of Nouember anno 1582," records as then extant: "the Freiris great rentall in parchment seilit of awld and confermit be the commissar of Glasgow in judgement and subscryvit be diuerse notaris; with the auld euidentis of Ballagan, xx merkis of Hammylton, vj bollis of wictuall of Darnlie, xx schillingis of Bogton, three pundis of Fynlaston, annuellis of Argyle, Buit, M'Clachlan, Dunbartan; with the awld euidentis of the Freiris manse, yaird, and kirkyaird, and of monye of all thare annuellis throwch the toune; with thare awld priuiledgis and rentall of Freir Lawis hand filled with such devices as never fail, in any age, to gain the many "who will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and turn away their ears from the truth, and be turned unto fables."[3] Hence it was that both the Dominicans and their rivals, the other great Mendicant Order which took its name from Saint Francis, rose so suddenly in the popular affection and esteem, that, in the words of Matthew Paris, himself a Benedictine, "the Monks did not, in three or four hundred years, ascend to such a height of greatness as the Friars, Minors and Preachers, within twenty-four years after they began to build their first house in England."[4]

Dominican Convents in Scotland.

The progress of the Preaching Friars in the northern region of the island, was scarcely less rapid. They found a munificent patron in the writ; with sum vthir new rentallis, and Freir Lawis acquittance." None of these rentals is now to be found; and of the charter of Ballagan, only a modern copy has been discovered in the Advocate's Library at Edinburgh.

[3] II. Timothy, iv. 3, 4.

"Saint Dominic's character as a preacher," says a living writer, "was to introduce pithy stories, something in the way of Rowland Hill, but with still less, probably, of gravity or reverence. His disciples imitated his practice; and if we may trust the account of an Italian religious poet, who lived in the same century with Dominic, their artifices by such means to catch the applause of their hearers were paltry enough:

"Christ said not to the convent of His twelve,
'Go forth, and preach buffooneries to the world,'
But gave them truth to build on; and the sound
Was mightier on their lips than shield or spear.
The Preacher now provides himself with store
Of jests and gibes; and if his hearers laugh,
His big cowl swells with pride, and all goes right."

(Churton's Early English Church, pp. 353, 354. Lond. 1841.). The kind of parallel which the prebendary of York suggests, has been traced at great length by Bishop Lavington of Exeter, in a work which enjoyed no small popularity during the last century, and has been reprinted within these thirty years. The late Poet Laureate has left an expression of his regret that in the reformed Anglican communion "no attempt was made to substitute something for the Mendicant Orders, and to incorporate an auxiliary force for the service of the national church: perhaps if this had been done, the Puritans would never have set these kingdoms in a flame; certainly, Wesley and Whitefield would, like Francis and Dominic, have found their place, and Methodism would have kept within the bounds to which the founders, notwithstanding their sincere wish, were not able to confine it." (The Quarterly Review, vol. xxii. no. xliii., p. 90. July 1819.). Mr Southey has claimed as his own the paper in which this passage occurs, by a note in his Book of the Church, p. 183. edit. Lond. 1837.

King of the Scots, Alexander II.[5] A tradition of the sixteenth century bore that the youthful descendant of Saint Margaret and Saint David, while at Paris, about the year 1217, beheld the renowned Founder of the Order himself, and besought of him that he would send some brethren of his rule into Scotland.[6] The Saint is said to have complied with the [5] "Anno Domini MCCXXX. ingrediuntur primo Scotiam Fratres Jacobini, quos allexit Alexander rex; et in magna teneritudine tanquam patronus, vel procurator singularis, eis astitit, loca designavit, ornavit, et fundavit." (Joannis Forduni Scotichronicon, lib. ix. cap. xlvii., vol. ii. p. 58. edit. Edinb. 1759.). "Fratres ordinis Predicatorum primo intrant Scociam, et honorifice suscepti sunt ab Alexandro rege, locis per eum datis et ordini ornatis, anno Domini m° ii° xxx." (Extracta e Variis Cronicis Scocie, p. 93. Edinb. 1842.). The Friars Preachers are commonly supposed to have received the style of Jacobins in France and Italy, from the name of their chief convent in Paris, which was originally an Hospital for the reception of Pilgrims on their way to the shrine of Saint James at Compostella. But a different, and perhaps a more probable, account of the origin of the appellation may be seen in Matthew Paris, (Historia Major, p. 161.).

Clement, bishop of Dunblane, the first Dominican in Scotland.

The order is said to have been brought to Scotland by Friar Clement, who had himself received the habit at the hands of Saint Dominic, and was elected Bishop of Dunblane in the year 1233. (D. Camerarii De Scotorvm Fortitvdine, p. 118.). It is at least certain that the Bishop was a brother of the order. (Chronica de Mailros, p. 143. Edinb. 1835.). John of Fordun gives him high praise: "Anno Domini MCCLVI. obiit egregius praedicator de ordine Praedicatorum Clemens episcopus Dumblanensis, variarum linguarum interpres eloquentissimus; vir potens sermone et opere coram Deo et hominibus: qui etiam episcopatus sui cathedralem, praedecessorum suorum incuria, invenit aporiatam in tantum, ut in ea, tanquam in rurali capella, vix in hebdomada ter divina celebrarentur: quam in insigne sanctuarium construxit, terris et possessionibus ditavit, praebendis et canonicis exaltavit." (Joannis Forduni Scotichronicon, lib. x. cap. xi., vol. ii. p. 92.).

[6] "Aliquot annis quam haec gesta sunt aduenerunt in Scotiam viri sanctitate clari a Diuo Dominico missi. Nam ferunt Alexandrum, cum in Galliam ad Philippum ad redintegranda antiqua foedera venisset, forte etiam Dominicum conuenisse, multumque precatum vt, ex iis quos ipse secum habebat, sanctos quosdam viros in Scotiam ad erudiendum populum mitteret: quod vbi factum est, maximo apud Alexandrum honore habiti sunt, aedesque vbi agerent aut suppeditatae sunt aut nouae aedificatae. (H. Boethii Scotorvm Hist., lib. xiii. foll. 283, 284. edit. Paris. 1575.).

"Alexandrum II.," says a writer of the subsequent century (a Scotish ecclesiastic whose elevation to the purple, a premature death alone prevented), "duae Christiano Principe dignae exornant virtutes, iustitia et pietas. Iustitia maxime

Monarch's wish: it seems at least certain that the King, who died within fifteen years after the canonization of Saint Dominic in 1234, founded no fewer than eight houses of the order, namely, at Berwick-upon-the-Tweed, at Perth, Ayr, Stirling, Aberdeen, Edinburgh, Inverness, and Elgin in Murray.[7] During the same reign, or in the earlier years of the succeeding sovereign, a convent was planted at Glasgow; the Maiden of Galloway built another at Wigton; the Earls of Fife established a third at Cupar; a fourth was erected at Montrose by the great northern house of the Ostiarii or Durwards; and, at a period not long subsequent, a fifth, in the ecclesiastical capital of the kingdom, owed its foundation to the bounty of William Wischard, bishop of Saint Andrews.[8]

learn, from another source, that they were settled in our city as early at least as the year 1246.[2] The Bishop, therefore, of whose pious charity they profited, must have been William of Bondington, "a very bountiful and munificent prelate" (say the chronicles), who held the office of chancellor to King Alexander II. during the latter half of his reign, rebuilt the cathedral of Glasgow in such wise that it was the wonder of the age, and remodelled its chapter according to the venerable usages which Saint Osmund had bequeathed to the church of Salisbury.[3]

Bulls of Pope Innocent IV.

Of the Muniments of the Friars Preachers which are printed in the following sheets, the earliest in point of time is a Bull of Pope Innocent IV.,[4] in the year 1244, empowering and enjoining the ordinaries of dioceses to grant the benefit of absolution and the grace of dispensation to the brethren of the order for any offences which they might commit, meriting sentence of excommunication or note of irregularity, except they were sins of such enormity as to require that the penitent should repair in person to the Apostolic See.

A second Bull of the same Pope, dated from Lyons on the tenth of July 1246, grants forty days' indulgence (that is, remits so much of the penance enjoined by the canons) to all the faithful who should contribute to the completion of the church and other edifices which the Friars Preachers of Glasgow had begun to build.[5]

Charter of King Alexander III.

The first trace of any endowment to the convent, appears in the year inventory of the deeds in the archives of the University at that date, makes mention of "the awld euidentis of the Freiris manse, yaird, and kirkyaird;" and this description can scarcely apply to any of the documents now in the charter room of the College.

1252, when King Alexander III. issued his letters patent to the bailies of Dunbarton commanding them to pay ten pounds yearly, from the rents of that burgh, to the Friars Preachers of Glasgow, in lieu of the King's obligation to find them in food for one day in every week.[6]

Bulls of Pope Clement IV.

More than half a century elapses before we meet with the record of any increase to this slender revenue, the only deeds of intermediate date being two Bulls of Pope Clement IV., in the year 1265, in favour of the institute at large. By the first of these, the successor of Saint Peter pronounces sentence of excommunication upon all persons daring to offer violence to the churches or places of the brethren;[7] by the second, he proffers a hundred days' indulgence to all the repentant faithful who shall go in devotion to the churches of the Friars Preachers, on the anniversaries of their dedication, or on the festivals of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Saint Dominic the confessor, Saint Peter the martyr,[8] and the other saints held in veneration by the order.[9]

From incidental notices which have been preserved, we learn that during the reign of King Alexander III., the Friars Place in Glasgow was surrounded by a wall, and gave its name to a neighbouring wynd or vennel,[1] probably the same which, two centuries afterwards, came to be called by the name of the Gray Friars of the order of Saint Francis.

[1] In the year 1270, a house bequeathed to the vicars choral of the cathedral, by the subdean, Robert of Lanark, is described as "proximior Fratribus Predicatoribus in villa Glasguensi inter ipsos Fratres et domum Willelmi de Bellidstane." (Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. i. p. 181.). About the year 1290, Finlay Jager, burgess of Glasgow, sells to Sir James of Reinfru, chaplain, a house and garden in Glasgow, "in vico qui se extendit a muro Fratrum Predicatorum sursum versus Castrum, a parte australi vici predicti." (Id. vol. i. p. 198.). A few years later, Alan, the sacristan of the cathedral church, leaves to his successors in office "totam illam terram que tunc erat vacua jacentem infra burgum de Glasgu ex opposito Fratrum Predicatorum de Glasgu in Sojourn, in the Convent, of King Edward I. of England.

In the autumn of 1301, the Friars Preachers had to give harboury within their precinct, for three days, to King Edward I. of England, who spent the greater part of that year in bringing the western shires of Scotland under his dominion. The Accounts of his Wardrobe show that the hospitality of the brethren was requited with a payment of six shillings: "Fratribus Predicatoribus Glasguensibus pro pictancia sua trium dierum in mora Regis ibidem; per manus Fratris Johannis de Wrotham, apud Botheuille, sexto die Septembris: vj solidi."[2] The convent of the Preaching Friars was, doubtless, the only place in the city capable of receiving the royal retinue, else, perhaps, we might be allowed to suppose that it was made choice of by the King on account of the spacious splendour for which the buildings of the Dominicans generally were famous in that age.[3]

There is preserved in the office of the Queen's Remembrancer at Westminster, a roll of the same year (29th King Edw. I., 20 Nov. 1300—19 Nov. 1301), showing the quantity of iron bought and manufactured for King Edward's use at Glasgow: "De emptione ferri, et de utensilibus factis de ferro Domini Regis, apud Glasgu." (Notices of Original Unprinted Documents illustrative of the History of Scotland, p. 62. Printed for the Maitland Club, 1842.).

[3] Thus the author of Pierce the Plowman's Crede (written about the year 1390) describes the precinct, church, cloister, chapter house, fratery, dormitory, and infirmary of a Dominican convent:

"Than thought I to frayne the first of this foure ordres,

If there be any reason to credit a legend of the seventeenth century, the hospitality of the Friars Preachers of Glasgow was, not long after the sojourn among them of the English monarch, laid under the shadow of a heinous crime. Stephen of Donydouer, having been chosen to fill the episcopal throne of Saint Kentigern, took his departure for Rome to be consecrated there; but died by the way, "not without suspicion," says Archbishop Spottiswoode, "of poison given him at a feast made by the Friers Predicant of Glasgow."[4] I have not been able, however, to find any other trace of this story.

The Meadow Well in the Deanside.

In the year 1304, Robert Wischard, bishop of Glasgow, by a charter which was subsequently confirmed by his chapter, granted to the Friars

In the middle of the previous century, Matthew Paris is found inveighing against the Friars, "quod aedificia jam in Regales consurgunt altitudines. Hi jam sunt," he continues, "qui in sumptuosis et diatim ampliatis aedificiis, et celsis muralibus, thesauros exponunt impreciabiles, paupertatis limites, et basim suae professionis, impudenter transgredientes." (Historia Major, p. 541. Cf. p. 845.).

Preachers, a spring called "The Meadow Well," with the right of conducting it into their cloister, from its source in the Deanside.[5] This place yet retains the appellation which it bore five hundred years ago; and in the plentiful waters which still flow from it, we may, doubtless, recognise the fountain of the warlike churchman's gift, though all traces of its pristine state have been obliterated by the streets and alleys of the teeming city, and nothing but the old name is left to suggest

> "Quanto praestantius esset
> Numen aquae, viridi si margine clauderet undas

Hitherto the convent seems to have kept by the original vow of the order, "bearing the burden of voluntary poverty for Christ's sake."[6] But now it began to share in the long series of those endowments which in the end exposed the Preaching Brethren to such reproaches as we find recorded by Buchanan: "Dominicanis nequaquam eadem erat opulentia, sed certe tanta, ut mendicitatis professionem facile falsam redargueret, adeo ut non inscite quidam non Fratres Mendicantes sed Manducantes eos appellaret."[7]

Grant of forty shillings yearly, by the Chief of Clan Lachlan.

Guyllascop MacLachlan of Argyll, by a charter dated from his tower of Castle Lachlan, on the shore of Loch Fyne, on the Saturday before the Octave of Saint Martin, in the year 1314, gives to the Friars a yearly sum of forty shillings sterling, to be paid from the rents of his land of Kilbryd, beside Castle Lachlan, at two terms, one half at the Fair of Glasgow (which began on the sixth of July, being the Octave of Saint Peter and Saint Paul the Apostles, and lasted for eight days[8]), the other at Martinmas in winter.[9]

Donation by King Robert Bruce, of twenty merks yearly, from the rents of Cadyow.

In the following year, King Robert the First bestows on the convent, a yearly payment of twenty merks from his rents of Cadyow in Clydesdale. The grant, which was made at Ayr, is witnessed by the King's brother, Edward de Brus, Earl of Carrick, and Lord of Galloway; by the King's nephew, Sir Thomas Ranulph, Earl of Murray; by Walter, the Steward of Scotland; and by the good Sir James of Douglas.[1]

Charter by John of Govan.

A donation by a burgess of Glasgow, which, though without date, must be referred to this period,[2] is of interest, as supplying the first mention that has been observed of a name and place which the commercial enterprise of later times has made widely known. "Seven rigs of land lying in the field of BROMILAW, between the land of Sir Walter of Roule on the east, and the land of Saint Mary, which is held by Sir John Wyschard, on the west; also another rig lying in the same field, between the land of Sir Walter of Roule on the west, and the land of Agnes Broune on the east; which eight rigs Martin Sutor now holds and possesses, for a term of four years from Martinmas next, at the rent of five shillings sterling a year;" three rigs of land lying in the Croupis; a tenement in the Gallowgate; six shillings and "two days in harvest," being the yearly rent of a house in the High Street; forty pence yearly from a tenement in the Fishergate; and five shillings annually from a house on the north side of the Friar's Place or Cloister: all these, does John of Govan give, grant, and confirm to the Friars Preachers of Glasgow, "for the good of his own soul, of the souls of his predecessors and successors, and of all the faithful departed, and to the praise and glory of Almighty God, the Glorious Virgin Mary, and Saint John the Evangelist, in honour of whom the church of the said Friars is named."[3]

The convent found its next benefactor in a neighbouring baron, one who, having fought by the side of the Bruce, survived to recount his adventures to their metrical historian, the venerable father of Scotish poetry:

Gift of twenty shillings yearly, by Sir Alan of Cathcart.

> Worthi and wycht, stalwart and stout,
> Curtaiss, and fayr, and off gud fame,
> Schyr Alane off Catkert by name,

This good knight, "Alan of Cathkert, lord of that Ilk," by a charter dated in the year 1336, gives to the Friars Preachers of Glasgow, twenty shillings sterling from the yearly rent of his land of Bogtowne beside Cathkert.[5]

King David II. seems to have been bountiful in his concessions to the Dominicans.[6] The following sheets preserve two grants which he made in their favour, namely, a general protection in the year 1358 for the whole order, and letters patent in 1362, by which he specially takes the Prior and brethren of Glasgow, their lands and men, their whole goods, moveable and heritable, spiritual and temporal, into his lasting peace and protection.[7] We learn elsewhere, that in the year 1360 he made a donation to the convent, of two merks.[8]

The special protection of King David was renewed, in the year 1371, by his successor, the first King of the Stuart line, who also, five years afterwards, confirmed the grant which had been made to the Friars by his Donation by Sir John Stewart of Darnley, Constable of the Scots in France.

In the year 1419, an annual pension of two bolls of meal from the mill of Dernele, and of two bolls of wheat and two bolls of barley from the "maynis," or dominical lands of Crukistoune, was bestowed on the convent by John Stewart, lord of Dernele.[1] The charter is dated from Inchinnan, apparently on the eve of the gallant knight's departure for those French wars in which he was destined to play so noble a part.

Grants by Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochaw.

The Friars received more than one token of the pious affection of Sir Duncan Campbell, lord of Lochaw. In the year 1429, he granted them twenty shillings yearly, payable by equal portions at the festival of the Translation of Saint Thomas of Canterbury, and the Feast of Saint Martin in winter.[2] Twenty years later, the Knight of Lochaw bestowed on the convent another annual payment of the same amount from his rents of Incheruerusk, in the lordship of Cowale, on the shores of Loch Ayk.[3] The charter bears date from the Collegiate Church which the granter had founded, beside the Holy Loch, in honour of Saint Mund the Abbot.[4]

Mr Innes, the learned and accomplished editor of the Registers of so many of our Episcopal Sees and Religious Houses, suggests to me, that by "techis" may be meant "thecis," q. d. "from our coffers." I cannot but hesitate to dissent from the opinion of so great a master of charter lore; but I venture to think, though "thecis" might not improbably have passed into "techis," that "chetis" (which occurs four times, while the other is found only once) is scarcely a likely corruption of "thecis." May not some sort of casualty, or rent payable in kind, be intended?

The precept, of the year 1558–9, printed at p. 231 (no. 76.), which appears to refer to the same grant, is directed to the "officiar of Strathache," who, perhaps, may be identified with the "camerarius de Cowole" of the previous century.

From the period at which we now arrive, the existing muniments of the convent enable us to trace the succession of its Priors, although, perhaps, not in a perfect or altogether unbroken line. Succession of Priors.

The first name on the roll is that of Friar James Boyd, who appears as superior of the house in the year 1430, and had ceased to rule it before the year 1434. During his time, Sir William of Forfare, Prior of the Augustinian Canons Regular of Blantyre, bequeathed to the brethren, a tenement on the west side of the High Street of Glasgow;[5] and Alan Stewart, lord of Dernley, made over to them an annuity of twenty shillings from the lands of Cathkert, in satisfaction, it would appear, of a hundred crowns of gold which had been lent to his father, Sir John Stewart, by Friar Alan Lokart, from the common purse of the convent.[6] 1. Friar James Boyd.

In the beginning of the year 1434, Friar Oswald was Prior. In consideration of a rood of land on the east side of the High Street, conveyed to the convent by John Flemyng of the Cowglen, he undertakes on the part of himself and his brethren to pay ten shillings yearly, and to find stabling for two horses, "tyll the said John Flemyn, qwhen hym lykis tyll cum tyll do hys erandis, within the town; and attour, gyf it lykis the said Johne tyll cum and dwell within Glasgu, the said Priour sall byg tyll the said John an honest hall chamir and butler, with a yard for to set cale in, sic as afferis in thir thyngis till the said John till be herberijt in."[7] The deed supplies, probably, the earliest specimen which has been preserved of the vernacular speech of the people of Saint Mungo's Freedom.[8] 2. Alexander of Conyngham, lord of Kilmawrys (afterwards the first Earl of Glencairn), granted them four merks and a half yearly, from his lands of Fynlawstone in the barony of Renfrew, for the performance of three masses weekly, with an annual commemoration, for the souls of himself, his grandfather Sir William of Conyngham, knight, lord of Kilmawrys, Sir John of Danyhelston, and his heir Sir Robert of Danyhelston, knights, lords of that Ilk, and Sir Robert's daughter and heiress, Margaret, the wife of the Knight of Kilmawrys.[9]

A lady of many sorrows, Isabel, Duchess of Albany, and Countess of Lennox, bequeathed to the convent her lands of Balagane, in the vale of Endrick, for the repose of her father, Duncan, Earl of Lennox, of her husband, Murdac, Duke of Albany, of their first-born, Walter, of his brother Alexander, all of whom were beheaded on the same relentless block beneath the towers of Stirling, and of her second son, James, who died in exile, after a vain endeavour to avenge the overthrow of his house. The charter is dated from Inchmyrryne,[1] in Loch Lomond, on the eighteenth of May 1451, twenty-six years after the tragedy which left the granter so bereaved.[2]

Gift of the lands of Balagan, by the Duchess of Albany.

David of Cadioch, cantor of Glasgow, for the endowment of a chaplain at the Lady altar in the Friar's Church, gave to the convent an annuity of twelve merks, to be levied from lands and tenements within the burgh.[3]

[1] The ruins of this ancient stronghold of the Earls of Lennox, may still be traced amid the oaks at the west end of the island. (Statistical Account of Scotland, vol. iii. pp. 452, 453. Edinb. 1792.). It is apparently the place which is alluded to by the Abbot of Saint Colm's Inch, in his narrative of the events which followed the proscription of the race of Albany: "Immediate post parliamentum misit Rex dominos de Montegomorri, de Eliotston, et Kilmauris, ac Umphredum de Conyngham, milites, ad oppugnandum municipium de Lochlomond, ex parte Jacobi Stewart banniti ad cornu Regis custoditum, quod redditum est eisdem nomine Regis eodem anno [sc. 1425.] octavo die mensis Junii." [2] Pp. 171, 172. no. 29. The house of Albany and Lennox would seem to have held the Preaching Brethren in special affection. The convent of that order at Stirling, was chosen for the place of sepulture of the victims of the cruel jealousy, or heroic justice, of King James I.: "in Loco Fratrum Predicatorum ad australem partem maioris altaris sepulti sunt, figuris et armis eorundem depictis, dicti Dux Albanie, Duncanus comes de Leuenax eius socer, Walterus et Alexander." (Extracta e Variis Cronicis Scocie, p. 228.). When the surviving son James, "qui solus de filiis Ducis manus Regis evasit," after slaying the King's uncle, the Red Stewart of Dundonald, and giving the royal burgh of Dunbarton to the flames, was compelled to seek refuge in Ireland, the companion of his flight was a Preaching Friar, Finlay, bishop of Argyll. He died before the twenty-fifth of June 1485, having married Elizabeth Lindsay, and leaving as his heiress, Jonet Stewart, wife of Robert, or Robyne, of Hall, of the Fulbare. See below, pp. 176–182, 184, 191, 195–198, 253; Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. ii. pp. 406, 453, 458, 460, 461; Registrum Monasterii de Passelet, p. 390. Presented to the Maitland Club by the Earl of Glasgow, 1832.

His claim, which he is so careful to place on record, to the title of "the first Provest that wes in Glasgw," arose, doubtless, from the erection of the city into a regality, by the charter of King James II., dated at Edinburgh on the twentieth of April 1450. (Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis, vol. ii. pp. 375–377; vol. i. p. lv.). Hitherto it had been merely a burgh of barony, holding of the Bishop, governed by bailies appointed by him, and as such, exposed to occasional annoyance from its more highly privileged neighbours, the burghs royal of Rutherglen, Renfrew, and Dunbarton. (Acta Dominorum Auditorum, p. 9. Edinb. 1845.; Local Reports of the Commissioners on the Municipal Corporations of Scotland, vol. ii. pp. 3–5. Lond. 1835.). It was not until the year 1636, that, in the words of the authority last cited, "it may be said with propriety that the city of Glasgow was first placed in the rank of a royal burgh holden of the crown."

I need scarcely add, that, whatever difficulty there may be in determining all the functions of the "prepositi" who are found administering the affairs of the burgh in the thirteenth century, it is sufficiently certain that their office was very different from that of the "provost" of subsequent ages. A deed in the Chartulary of Glasgow, runs in the name of "Oliverus et Ricardus Smalhy prepositi et ceteri prepositi ac cives Glasguenses congregati in placitis burgi que tenebantur apud Glasgu die Martis in crastino Festi Exaltationis Sancte Crucis anno gratie m°. cc°. lxxxiij°." [5] Saint Catharine of Sienna, a nun of the order of Saint Dominic, died in the year 1380, and was canonized by Pope Pius II. in the year 1461. The devotion in which she was held by the order of the Friars Preachers, is ridiculed by Erasmus in his Dialogue of the Shipwreck: "ANTONIUS. Quid actum est de Dominicano? ADOLPHUS. Is, ut idem narrabat, implorata divorum ope, abjectis vestibus, nudum se commisit natationi. ANT. Quos divos invocabat? ADOL. Dominicum, Thomam, Vincentium, et nescio quem Petrum, sed in primis fidebat Catharinae Senensi. ANT. Christus illi non veniebat in mentem? ADOL. Ita narrabat sacrificus. ANT. Melius enatasset, si non abjecisset sacram cucullam: ea deposita, qui potuit illum agnoscere Catharina Senensis?" (Erasmi Colloquia, "Naufragium," p. 211.).

the city, "Placebo" and "Dirige" to be chanted in their choir, and a mass to be sung at Saint Katherine's altar by the whole convent, every Friar receiving "sex penyis and a galown of the best sale ale[6] of the town to the coventis collaciown"; and that, finally, they should grant him a right of sepulture in their church, in a vault to be built by him, at the north end of the altar of Saint Katherine.[7]

Grant of half a merk yearly, by the Laird of MacLachlan.

Donald Maclachlane, styled indifferently of Ardlawan and Castle Lachlan, beside confirming the gift made by his ancestor in the previous century, bestowed on the Friars an annuity of six shillings and eight pence from his lands of Kylbryde near Castle Lachlan.[8]

Convocations of the University held in the Chapter House of the Friars Preachers.

For many years, the convent of the Black Friars shared with the chapter house of the Cathedral, the merit of sheltering under its roof the more solemn assemblies of the poorly endowed University which a pious bishop founded in Glasgow, in the middle of the fifteenth century, and which seems, at least in its infancy, to have derived many of its disciples

[6] Intemperance appears to have been (at least in the age immediately preceding the Reformation) but too frequently an inmate of the Scotish cloister: "Mvltis non sufficit," writes Brother Robert of Cambuskenneth, "licet contra Deum et regulam, corporis animaeque sanitatem, extra horam prandij aliquid sumere, sed superfluis compotationibus a mano usque ad uesperam non satis religiose insistunt. Illic nonnunquam fiunt conspirationes et conuentiones contra praelatos et alios probos uiros: rixae, blasphemiae, contentiones, murmura: falsa iudicia, et uanae suspitiones. Vespertina hora cum itum sit ad chorum, silentium uiolant, alios impediunt, chorum perturbant, prauum de se omnibus spectaculum prebent, quemadmodum canes muti qui latrare nequeunt. Post uesperas ad coenam, post coenam ad commessationes itur: quo fit ut matutinalem orationem somnient, uel male apti inueniantur ad illam. Isti an Deo plus seruire student, an uentri, aliorum fratrum sit iudicium. Vnum ipse noui, qui talem in se generauit bibendi habitum horis praedictis, ut lectum ingredi ad cubandum noctu non auderet, nisi quod biberet ad caput haberet. Contigit autem ut semel non adesset, ita subito prae siti mortuus est. Huiusmodi sibijpsis mortem inferunt quod lege grauius est quam alijs inferre: hisce compotationibus uitam suam abbreuiant, innumerabiles morbos generant, malo exemplo alijs sunt: temperatos uero et probos uiros isti non diligunt, sed illis sunt scandalo." (Fratris Roberti Richardini Exegesis in Canonem Diui Augustini, foll. 95, 96.).

from the Monasteries and Friaries of the neighbourhood. Thus we find that in the general congregation of the University, held in the chapter house of the Friars Preachers, in the year 1451, there were incorporated members, the Abbot of Kilwynnyng, William Boyd; Sir William Fresell, Prior of Blantyre; Sir John Spark, and Sir Robert Quhyte, monks of Kilwynnyng;[9] while, in the year 1457, a congregation, held in the chapter house of the High Church, admitted to the privileges of the college three brethren of the rule of Saint Dominic, Friar Patrick Scharpe, Friar John Symsone, and Friar Andrew Hasting.[1] Again, in the year 1460, the professors both of the canon and the civil law in the University, began their prelections, in the chapter house of the Friars, in presence of a great body of the clergy and masters.[2]

4. Friar John Mure.

Friar John of Govan was succeeded by Friar John Mure, who appears as Prior in two charters of pieces of ground in the immediate neighbourhood of the convent, in the year 1468.[3] Two years afterwards (on the death of Friar John Mussilburch, doctor in theology), he was, by

Friar William Knokis governed the brethren of Glasgow but for a short time. He is found in only one deed of the series, an instrument of seisin of the year 1471, from which we learn that a cemetery adjoined the Succession of the Priors Provincial of the Preaching Friars in Scotland.

[6] The tradition of the order, as related by Friar Andrew Leys to the Knight of Roslin, in the year 1564, was, that the convent of Saint Monan's in Fife, was built and endowed by King James III., "at the solisitation of Freir Johune Muir, Vicar thain of that ordour in Scotland, maid be the Provinciall of Ingland;" and that Friar John Muir himself became "thaireftir first Provinciall of Scotland, be reasoun that Sanct Monans maid out the thirteenth Place; quherby thair wes ane province to mak ane Provinciall of Scotland; et hoc renitentibus Anglis." (Extracta e Variis Cronicis Scocie, p. 249.). Cf. Spottiswoode's Account of the Religious Houses in Scotland, in Bp. Keith's Catalogue of Scotish Bishops, pp. 445, 446.

According to the same tradition (corrected by the notices supplied by contemporary records), the succession of Priors Provincial of the Dominicans in Scotland, was this:

I. Friar John Mure, or Muir.
II. Friar Ninian Schanks.
III. Friar John Adam, or Adamson.
IV. Friar David Anderson.
V. Friar John Grierson, or Gryson. This last is said by Dempster to have been Provincial of his order for thirty years, and to have survived the Reformation. (T. Dempsteri Historia Ecclesiastica Gentis Scotorum, tom. i. p. 330. edit. Edinb. 1829.). Cf. Father Hay's Scotia Sacra, p. 626. MS. Adv. Bibl. Edinb. He was Prior of the convent at Aberdeen, in the year 1516 (Registrum Episcopatus Aberdonensis, vol. ii. pp. 311–313.), and is commemorated by Boece as one of the men of learning and piety who adorned the early years of the University of that city: "Ioannes Grysonius, Robertus Insulanus, et Alexander Aulicus praedicatorii instituti viri theologi spectabiles scientia et pietate." (H. Boetii Episcoporum Murthlacensium et Aberdonensium Vitae, fol. xxviii. E prelo Ascensiano, 1522.). As Provincial of the Friars Preachers, Gryson was one of the churchmen who sat in judgment on the heresy of Patrick Hamilton, in 1528. (Archbishop Spottiswoode's Hist. of the Church and State of Scotland, p. 63.).

Under the year 1329, the Chronicle of the Priory of Lanercost records, that "eodem anno obtinuerunt Fratres Scotti vicarium quemdam Generalis Ministri, et a Fratribus Angliae totaliter sunt divisi." (Chronicon de Lanercost, p. 265. Edinb. 1839. Presented to the Maitland Club by Archibald Campbell of Blythswood, esq.). The learned editor in his index (p. xxxvi.) refers this notice to the Fratres Praedicatores; but there can scarcely be a doubt that it applies to the Fratres Minores, the order to which the chronicler himself belonged.

convent, and that there were seven aspen trees near the entrance to the cloister.[7]

6. Friar Patrick of Govane.

He was followed by Friar Patrick of Govane, who filled the office of Prior from the year 1471 to the year 1476. The charters which fall to be referred to his time, are three deeds regarding houses in "the Black Friars' Wynd, or south vennell of the brethren;"[8] a grant, by Colin Campbell of Ormadale, of half a merk yearly, from his lands of Ardgartricht in Cowale;[9] and an agreement with Mathew Stewart, laird of Castlemilk, for the performance of a daily mass for his own soul, "ande for the sawlis of his modir ande barnis that thar banis restis in owr Place," in consideration of an annual payment to the convent of ten merks; it being stipulated that, if the payment were increased to twenty merks a year, the commemoration should be changed from a said mass to a sung mass with note. The contract bears to be made, on the part of the Friars, by the Vicar General of the order, and the Diffinitors[1] of a general chapter held in June 1473, with the sanction of the Prior and convent of Glasgow and of all the Priors of the nation.[2]

Masses to be said for Mathew Stewart, laird of Castlemilk.

7. Friar John Smyth.

In the year 1478, Friar John Smyth was Prior. With consent of the convent, he conveyed a plot of its adjacent ground to Master Robert Forester, on condition that, in the house which he was then building, he should Mathew Paris, an enemy of the Friars Mendicant, records that on the occasion of their chapters, or general assemblies, they were maintained at the charge of the great and wealthy among their friends and patrons: "Et quia proprias non habebant facultates, magnates et praelati ex liberalitate sua eis victualia invenerunt, praecipue tamen qui civitatem Londinum inhabitabant et loca vicina . . . . . quibus ipsi literatorie supplicaverunt, ut de divitum copia inopia egentium sublevaretur." 8. Friar Andrew Cunyngham.

The next superior of the house was Friar Andrew Cunyngham, who, in the year 1481, became bound, on the part of his convent, that during the lifetime of Sir John Cadder, an ecclesiastic who conveyed to them a house in the High Street, they should make an annual payment to him of five shillings; and that "after he had gone the way of all flesh," they should procure a trental,[4] or service of thirty masses, to be celebrated for his soul yearly; that they should, on the anniversary of his decease, cause Saint Mungo's bell to be rung through the city, and should themselves perform on the same day "Placebo" and "Dirige," with other offices for the departed; and that, on the following day, a mass for his repose should be celebrated by every conventual brother who felt himself disposed for the pious service.[5]

9. Friar David Crag.

The successor of Friar Andrew Cunyngham was installed in office before the year 1484,[7] and retained it at least until the year 1487, when we find him enrolled among the members of the University by the style of "Frater Dauid Crag, sacre theologie professor, ac Prior Glasguensis Fratrum Predicatorum."[8]

Indentures between the Friars, and Robyne of Hall, of the Fulbare.

In the year 1485, he entered into indentures with Robert of Hall, of the Fulbare, and his spouse, Jonet Stewart, the heiress of "the first provest that wes in Glasgu," whereby the transference of a rig of land, and the payment of forty-three shillings annually, are stipulated on the one side; and, on the other, the performance is undertaken of certain masses and other religious offices (enumerated in the vernacular with considerable minuteness), provision being made in set phrase, that every Friar taking part in the services shall have a gallon of good ale, with bread and cheese at the convent's evening repast, which took its name from the "Collations" either of Holy Scripture or of the Acts of the Saints, appointed to be read aloud by one of the brethren for the edification of the rest.[9]

Chantry founded by William Stewart, prebendary of Killearn.

On the fifteenth of June 1487, a Provincial Chapter of the order was held at Edinburgh, Friar John Mure, first Provincial of Scotland, presiding, the Priors of Glasgow, Edinburgh, Aberdeen, and Saint Andrew's, being Diffinitors. The assembly gave its sanction to the foundation, by William Stewart, prebendary of Killerne, and rector of Glasford, of a chaplainry at the great altar of the Friar's church in Glasgow, for the souls of himself, of his parents, and of John Stewart, Earl of Lennox and Lord Darnley. In consideration of the spiritual services to be rendered by the convent, the founder undertook to complete the edifice which had dissolutionis uitationem, quae inter epulas obrepere solet: ad uirorum secularium differentiam, quos bono exemplo anteire debemus. Illi enim ad tempus legunt, quod etiam reformati faciunt: si cum hospitibus, aut amicis discumbant, in prandij initio aut fine aliquid aedificatorium legunt. . . . . In consilio tamen Toletano statutum erat, ut in conuiuio sacerdotali semper fiat lectio paginae sanctae. Quod institutum a multis huiusce aetatis praelatis omnino contemnitur, qui omne aetatis tempus cum mulieribus et prophanis transigunt. Sed meus tamen praelatus ueneranddissimus in Christo pater et dominus, totius nostrae religionis lumen, in uotis det illi Dominus perseuerantiam ad laudem Dei, ordinis decorem, suamque salutem: Dominus Alexander Millij longe aliter fecit, et ante religionis ingressum canonicus ecclesiae Aberdonensis et DumKeldensis illiusque officialis spectatissimus, et nunc etiam nostri ordinis Abbas reuerendus; qui eam consuetudinem induxit, ut continuo prandij tempore, praesertim his diebus quibus piscibus uesci solemus, aliquid legeretur; alijs autem diebus, et in prandij initio et fine: Nec satisfit regulae quae dicit: Donec inde surgatis, et praesertim in communi refectorio: Et ideo melius tamen faceret, si lectio sacra continuaretur, nisi Collatione de Scripturis interrumperetur (sicuti de patre Augustino legitur, qui magis lectioni quam epulationi intendebat.). Quoties autem ipse aderat, uti semper fere, praecipue Sabbato quo regula legitur, in medio prandio compendiosam et utilem concionem fecit: et ut alios redderet attentiores et diligentiores, nonnullos ex suis praeter eorum spem ex tempore iussit concionari. Elsewhere he renews his invective against the negligence or dissolute manners of many among the superiors of monastic houses: "Atqui praelatorum huiusce tempestatis bona pars curant magis uisitantque frequentius equos, canes, nisosque atque meretrices, quam ex fratribus aliquem uel in extremis constitutum. . . . Mirandum profecto atque potius dolendum praefectorum genus, quippe qui terrenis affectibus ita sese deuouerunt, ut uix e decem unum reperias, qui coelum sapiat et futura consyderet," (foll. 109, 110.). "Praelati certe sunt ut canes muti, non ualentes in claustro latrare: incedunt cum regibus et magnatibus in urbibus et pallatijs: unde non been begun in the space between their Church and Dormitory, on the west side of the Cloister. The building was to be of three storeys; the first containing five or six vaults, as should be determined by the Friars; the second, two halls, two kitchens, and four chambers; and the third, as many upper rooms. It was to be of equal height with the adjoining church, and to be provided honestly with benches and wooden work: the walls were to be of ashlar on the outside, and the roof was to be covered with slates.[1]

10. Friar Thomas Symson.

Friar Thomas Symson, who appears as Prior in a deed of the year 1497 (endowing an annual obit at Saint Katherine's altar, for David Prowde, succentor of Glasgow[2]), continued to administer the rule of the house for nearly twenty years.[3]

Annuity payable to the Friars from a tenement in Dunbarton.

On the fifth of May 1500, he presented himself before the bailies of Dunbarton, sitting in judgment in their tolbooth, and demanded that they should make trial by an inquest of the burgesses of the town and assize of court, whether his convent had right to an annual payment from a certain tenement in the burgh adjoining the lands of the Laird of Buchanan. The jurors being duly sworn, found and declared with one voice, that the deceased Margaret, lady of Cowgran, was sometime lady of the said tenement; that she gave seisin in it, of an annual rent of ten shillings to the convent for their orisons and prayers; that William Danyelstone her son and heir, and John Smollet the elder, and John his son and heir, had paid the annual rent without any impediment or obstacle whatsoever; and that the convent had enjoyed the same in peace for a term of fifty years.[4]

In the year 1509, Sir Archibald Calderwood, vicar of Cadder, among other pious bequests, left eight shillings yearly to the Black Friars, to sing a "Dirige" for him on the Feast of All Souls, with a mass on the morrow; together with eight shillings to the regents and students of the neighbouring Pedagogy or College, to appear at the service, such of them as were priests taking part both in the "Dirige" and in the mass, the others saying only the "Dirige."[7]

11. Friar John Spense.

Friar John Spense, bachelor in divinity, who, in the previous summer, was superior of the house at Edinburgh,[8] appears as Prior of Glasgow in the year 1517.[9] To his time, perhaps, we may refer a copy (authenticated by a notary's signature, but without date) of a bull of Pope Leo the Tenth, in the year 1518, confirming the privileges of hearing confession and granting absolution which had been conceded to the Mendicant Orders by several of his predecessors in the chair of Saint Peter.[1] These immunities, by the long and bitter strife which they stirred up between the parochial clergy and the Begging Friars,[2] had largely contributed to the event of the

[2] We learn from a tradition of the fatal fields of Flodden and Pinkie, which has been preserved by our Scotish Feudalist, that in Scotland, as elsewhere, confession made to the brethren of the Mendicant Orders, was considered by the weaker or more devout of the laity, as of greater avail than the penitence professed to a secular priest. Reformation; and they were at length, in the year 1563, placed under stringent control by a decree of the Council of Trent.[3]

12. Friar Robert Lyle.

Friar Robert Lyle, commemorated by Boece[4] as one of the distinguished scholars sent forth from the newly founded University of Aberdeen, was chosen Prior of the brethren at Glasgow, before October 1519.[5] He had previously governed the convent at Perth, and was one of the four Diffinitors of the Provincial Chapter of his order holden at Stirling on the Feast of Saint Matthew the Apostle and Evangelist, in the year 1516.[6]

The Annals of the University of Glasgow record that, "on the twenty-fourth of March 1521-2, within the Place of the Black Friars, in presence of the Rector, Dean of Faculty, and other masters of the College, and under the presidency of a venerable father, Friar John Adamson, doctor in theology, and Provincial of the Friars Preachers in Scotland, Friar Robert Lile, bachelor in divinity, and Prior of the convent of Glasgow, began the exposition of the fourth book of the Sentences," probably from the commentary of Saint Thomas Aquinas, the great light and ornament of the Dominican order.[7]

The office of Prior was held by Friar Robert Lyle, but it would seem not continuously, until the beginning of the year 1542, when he appears on record as receiving seisin for behoof of his house, of an annuity of ten marks from the lands of Strathaven, in the barony and lordship of Aven-

(Annales Univ. Glasg. 1451–1558. MS.).

Friar John Adamson, Provincial of the Dominicans in Scotland.

The name of Friar John Adam or Adamson, has been already incidentally mentioned, (above p. xxxvii., note 6; p. liii., note 6.). His contemporaries have highly extolled his learning, zeal, and piety. Hector Boece thus speaks of him, in a passage instructive of the history of the Dominicans in Scotland: "Ioannes Adamus sacrae theologiae professor pietate insigni atque eruditione: primus qui Aberdoniae magisterii fastigium ea in facultate est adeptus: nunc [A.D. 1521] Praedicatorum Fratrum intra Scotorum regnum summum (quem Prouincialatum dicunt) agit magistratum: is pio et religioso animo exempli locum meretur inter primos sui instituti. Indigne siquidem ferens sacram Praedicatorum religionem neglectam inter nostros adeo vt pene contemptui daretur: non maris pericula horrens, non aemulorum saeuitiam, minas, iniurias: non laboribus, non corpori parcens, duram admodum subiens prouinciam vt labefactata repararetur: magnis et incredibilibus obtinuit laboribus: effectumque vt nunc eruditi, pii, et religiosi qui sacras literas enarrant, profitentur, concionantur, illius instituti viri frequentes inter nos reperiantur: quae omnia Ioannis piis sudorbus vlla sine controuersia accepta sunt ferenda." (Episcoporum Murthlacensium et Aberdonensium Vitae, ff. xxviii, xxix.). Myln, the historian of the see of Dunkeld, calls him "magnum illum et illuminatum virum, sacrarum literarum professorem, ordinis Provincialem." (Vitae Episcoporum Dunkeldensium, p. 55. Edinb. 1831.). We learn from the Lives of the Superiors of Kynlos in Murray, that Abbot Thomas Chrystall sent his young Cistertians to be instructed in theology, under Friar Adamson, in the convent of the Black Friars at Aberdeen: "erat tum temporis in eo loco vir pius Frater Joannes Adami, Dominicani ordinis in Scotia primas, et theologiae scholasticae doctor insignis." (J. Ferrerii Historia Abbatum de Kynlos, p. 80. Edinb. 1839.).

Friar Adamson is said to have written two books, the one "De Vitae Monasticae Laude," the other "De Dominicanis Illustribus;" but this rests on no better authority than that of Dempster. (Historia Ecclesiastica Gentis Scotorum, t. i. p. 37; t. ii. p. 343.). He appears as Prior of the convent at Aberdeen, from the year 1501 to the year 1510. (Denmyln Collection of Charters, no. 89. MS. Adv. Bibl. Edinb.; Kennedy's Annals of Aberdeen, vol. ii. pp. 71, 72. Lond. 1818.). He was Provincial of the order of Saint Dominic in Scotland, at least as early as November 1514. dale, and shire of Lanark.[8] This was a grant made to the convent by Sir James Hamilton of Fynnart, commonly called The Bastard of Arran, for offerings and orisons to be made by them for the soul of John Earl of Lennox, whom Hamilton had slain in cold blood, on the field of Linlithgow, upon the fourth of September 1526.[9]

Between the first and last years, during which Friar Lyle ruled the brethren, two other Priors appear to have been interposed.

13. Friar Alexander Barclay.

"Friar Alexander Barclay, Prior of the Friars Preachers of Glasgow," and "Friar John MacDovell, Sub Prior," occur in the list of members of the University of Glasgow, incorporated on the twenty-sixth of February 1529-30.[1]

14. Friar George Crechtoune.

On the seventh of June 1532, "Friar George Crechtoune, Prior of the Friars Preachers of Glasgow," is admitted to the privileges of the same institution.[2]

15. Friar John Huntar.

The last Prior, of whose government there is record in the following sheets, was Friar John Huntar. He is found administering the affairs of the brethren from the year 1553 to the year 1558;[3] during which period

In May 1544, after the conflict on the common moor of Glasgow, known in our local traditions as "The Battle of the Butts," the victorious Earl of Arran, the governor of the kingdom, held his council in the Black Friars' Place. (Bishop Lesley's History of Scotland, p. 177. Edinb. 1830.).

"The Earl of Lenox, they found lying slain cruelly, by Sir James Hamilton that tyrant, after that he was taken in the field by the laird of Pardovan, and his weapons taken from him. Sir James Hamilton slew him without mercy, and so did he all that he might overtake that day in the field. . . . This being done, the King's servants came and saw the Lord Hamilton standing mourning beside the Earl of Lenox, saying, 'The wisest man, the stoutest man, the hardiest man, that ever was born in Scotland, was slain that day.'" (Lindsay of Pitscottie's Hist. of Scot., pp. 252, 253. Glasg. 1749.).

Buchanan relates a bold attempt of one of Lennox's grooms to revenge his master's death, by assassinating the Bastard at the palace gates of Holy Rood, in the midst of two thousand of his followers, Douglasses and Hamiltons, in arms. (Rer. Scotic. Hist. lib. xiv. cap. xxxi.).

16. Friar Andrew Leich.

Friar John Huntar was succeeded by Friar Andrew Leich,[6] who, together with his Sub Prior, Friar John Law, made an effort to save some portion of the conventual property from the wreck of the Reformation, by appending the common seal of the house, to a deed conveying the gardens fellony." (Diurnal of Occurrents in Scotland, p. 13. Edinb. 1833. Printed for the Maitland Club.).

[5] Mr. Riddell's Remarks upon Scotch Peerage Law, pp. 153, 154. Edinb. 1833. The learned author cites as his authority, "Acts Dom. Con. et Sess. of 13th June 1553;" but the record of that date has been searched in vain for any mention of the procedure referred to.

[6] The last Prior of the Dominicans of Glasgow, may, perhaps, be identified with the Preaching Friar of the same name, of whose courage, during the siege of Leith in 1560, this anecdote is told by a Scotish ecclesiastic of the succeeding century: "Nec silendum videtur quod die [14 Aprilis], qui triumphanti de morte Christo sacer est, in magna hominum frequentia contigit. Scotti Gallique dignitate ac virtute praecipui, in maiore Leythi Ecclesia, ad solemne sacrum conuenerant: hoc Andreas Lecho ex Divi Dominici familia peragebat: hostis cui notus erat publicorum votorum inter Catholicos ritus, quo securam in maximo hominum conuentu cladem faceret, maiora aliquot tormenta, quae a colubris nomina habent, tanto artificio contra Ecclesiam disposuit, vt globi fenestra, quae iuxta altare erat, exciperentur. by which it was surrounded to a burgess of the city. This grant, which is dated on the thirteenth of November 1560, perhaps, never took full effect, and in a few years it was formally set aside.[7] By a charter under the great seal, dated at Edinburgh on the sixteenth of March 1566-7, Queen Mary bestowed the Black Friars' Place with its endowments, and all other ecclesiastical revenues within the city, upon the provost, bailies, council, and community, for the support of the ministers of the gospel, and the erection of an hospital for the poor and infirm of Glasgow.[8] The donation was confirmed and extended by a deed of the fifth of June 1568, under the privy seal of King James the Sixth;[9] and on the eighth of January 1572-3, the greater part of the rights which the municipal corporation had thus acquired, were transferred to the University by a charter[1] to which the sanction of parliament was immediately interposed.[2] The College, in the name of its principal, Mr. Andrew Melville, then instituted an action, before the lords of council and session, for the reduction of "the pretendit charter of fewferme alledgit maid be Freir Andro "Leich, Priour of the Freiris Predicatouris of Glasgow, with consent and "assent of Freir Johnne Law, Suppriour, and of the remanent convent of the "Place, vnder their comoun seale and subscriptiounnis, and speciallie vnder

By a charter under the privy seal, of date the eighteenth of February 1565–6, "the lands of Balagan, with the pertinents called Friarland in Dunbartonshire, which belonged to this convent, were granted to Matthew, Earl of Lennox, because they had been given to the convent by his predecessors." In consequence of this judgment, a formal surrender was made to the University, on the twenty-seventh of February 1578-9, of the property in dispute, which is described as "the Great Yaird sumtyme per-"tening to the Freiris Predicatouris of Glasgw, with the small yairdis "adiacent thairto as the West Freir Yarde, the Colhowse, and Closter "Knot, the Paradyce[4] Yairdis uver and neather, with the remanent small "yardis adiacent thairto."[5]

The Friars' Church.

The conventual Church, founded as we have seen in the thirteenth century, seems to have been the only building of the Friars which long survived the Reformation. It remained, though more than once in a ruinous state, until about the year 1670, when it was destroyed by lightning, and another church, which still exists, was built on its site.[6]

[4] The name of "Paradise" was given not merely to the enclosures of Monasteries and Friaries, but to gardens generally. It is defined by Minsheu as "a place of pleasure; hortus domesticis et fructus edules ferentibus arboribus consitus: generale nomen est, omnes significans hortos in quibus animalia viuunt, quique amoenitate quadam gaudent singulari." (Minsheu's Gvide into Tongves, p. 347. n. 8961. Lond. 1617.). The word, in its more extended sense, is, perhaps, not yet altogether obsolete in Scotland. See F. Douglas' Description of the East Coast of Scotland, p. 235. Paisley 1782.

[6] M'Ure's View of the City of Glasgow, pp. 50, 51.

The history of the Black Friars' Church after the Reformation, may be traced in the extracts from the Registers of the Kirk Session of Glasgow, which Wodrow has preserved in his "Life of Mr David Weemes." (MS. Bibl. Univ. Glasg.).

"7 March 1588. The commissioners appointed by the King's Majesty anent repairing the High Kirk, and haill brethren of the Kirk Session of Glasgow, ordain all the pendent silver for repairing the Colledge Kirk.

"25 Aprile 1588. Appoints some to go to the Laigh Kirk beneath the High Kirk, and see what of the pavements contained therein are unstollen away, which the session thinks good should be transported to the Laigh Kirk of Glasgow to pavement it. Next day, it's concluded that these pavements should be transported to the Laigh Kirk, called the Blackfreirs.

"20 February 1589. Some are ordained to go to the principall and masters of the Colledge, that they may repair the Blackfrier Kirk, and hold the same wind-fast and water-fast. This is repeated 7 January 1605.

"2 May 1594. The session appoints as much cloath of green collour to be bought as will cover the pulpit of the High Kirk and the Blackfrier Kirk.

"13 May 1602. Some are appointed to buy cloath and sashes for the Blackfriers pulpit.

"16 October 1589. That there be no playing at golf, carri, or shinny, in the High Kirk or Kirk-yeard, or Blackfrier Kirk-yeard, either Sunday or workday.

"23 May 1588. Because the exercise of the presbitry interfeirs with the preaching in the Blackfreirs on Friday, therefore the session desires the presbitry, by a message, to alter the day of their exercise; after which, intimation is made that preaching with consent of session and presbitry, is to be in the Blackfriers, Wednesday and Friday.

"28 February 1611. Mention of candles furnished to the Blackfrier Kirk this season.

"7 March 1587. The session appoints sermons on the week days in the Colledge Kirk; and the first pastor to exercise on Wednesday, the second, on Friday.

"26 March 1601. Sermons to be in the High Kirk till the grammar school be bigged, because the bairns are learning in the Blackfrier Kirk.

"7 November 1605. It is intimat the Tuesday's preaching to be in the High Kirk, and Thursday's in the Blackfrier Kirk.

"2 February 1660. The session find it proper that sermon on Tuesday be in the Blackfriers, till cause be found to alter it.

"14 November 1594. The beddalls are ordered to open the Blackfrier Kirk door at seven, and close it at nine, forenoon.

"1 November 1638. That all who have children to be baptized and cannot attend on the ordinary preaching dayes, bring them to the Blackfriers Kirk at the morning or evening prayers, where there will be a preacher attending to baptize them.

"5 October 1639. That no benefite will be granted to any, unless they come to the preaching and prayers, and that in the Blackfriers Kirk only, till they get moe preachers.

"1586. The session seems at this time to meet in the Blackfriers Kirk, and afterward; only publick and more solemn meetings for changing the session, fasts, etc., were in the Chapter House.

"22 May 1606. The session ordains a ward house to be made in the Blackfriers Kirk steeple.

"December 1648. The session recommends it to the magistrates to provide a seat for the grammar school in the Blackfrier Kirk.

"2 March 1648. The session appoints visitation of triviall schools to be in the Blackfrier Kirk on Teusday next, by the magistrates and ministers, and all the masters to be warned thereunto.

"27 January 1659. The magistrates are to be dealt with about repairing the Blackfreir Kirk, which is like to be ruinous.

"2 December 1596. It's noticed that the Colledge made their masters (that is, had a publick laureation), in the Blackfrier Kirk."

Some farther notices of the building occur in the registers of the Town Council. "1574, April 24. It is statute, thocht gude, and ordanit be the prouest, baillies, and counsale, that the westir ruinous gavill of the Blackfreir Kirk, and the stanes thairof, be tane doun, and be the skellat [i. e. hand-bell] precedyng, rowpit and sauld to the maist avale, and the price thairof conuertit and applyit to the mendyng of the vyndois and ministeris sait in the said Kirk." (Burgh Records of the City of Glasgow, M.D.LXXIII.—M.D.LXXXI., p. 8.).

The burgh treasurer in his account for the year 1575, takes credit for a payment of fourteen shillings, on the fifteenth of March, "to the barrow men, at the maister of workis command, for bering of the stanes that fell aff the Blackfreir Kirk." (Id. p. 61.) In 1578 there is an entry of the general store of our ecclesiastical antiquities; but it is, unquestionably, in a narrower point of regard, as illustrating the old topography of the City of Saint Kentigern, that their chief importance will be found. In this belief, I have printed, in the APPENDIX, a selection from the more curious or instructive of the great mass of deeds which are preserved in the charter room of the University, regarding lands and houses within the burgh.

To turn these documents (with the records which they accompany, and the much more important contents of the "Registrum Episcopatus Glasguensis") to their full account, is a pleasing labour which must be reserved to the local antiquary, when one qualified for such a duty shall arise to rescue the history of Glasgow[7] from the hands of ignorance and incapacity a payment of eight shillings and fourpence "for making of ane tong to the Freir bell." (Id. p. 105.) In 1577 "the outlandemeris" or perambulators of the burgh reported to the Whitsunday court, that "the Freir medo is biggit with the commone." (Id. p. 72.).

On the fourth of June 1635, the University "considering the ruinous condition of the Black Friers Kirk, and the great charges that the reparation therof would cost the College; therefore (and in respect the town has not only undertaken the reparation, but likewise has given the College 2000 merks for supplie of the building of the new work therof), the College dispones to this burgh the forsaid Blackfrier Kirk with ish and entrie therto in the ordinary place, with the Kirkyaird therof west frae the gavell of the said Kirk to the meill mercat, with eleven ells of breadth alongst both the south and north side wall of the Kirk, within the yaird called Blackfriers' yaird, for enlarging the Kirk at their pleasure: reserving to the College and scholars and students therin and members therof, a comodious place and seat in the said Kirk, next best after the counsall seat; and the use of the Kirk yearly at the making of the masters, and other occasions when they please." (Inventary of the Wrytes and Evidents of and concerning the Burgh of Glasgow, MS. in archivis ejusdem.).

[7] M'Ure's book, though the oldest, is yet the best which we have on the subject. It is, at the same time, only too obvious that, even if he could have had access to the records from which the annals of the city must be written, he was without the knowledge necessary either to read or to understand them. His mistakes, gross as they are, have been, for the most part, implicitly copied by his successors, few of whom were more competent than himself, and some, indeed, were still more illiterate.

I have not considered it necessary, in the preceding pages, to detain the reader by adverting to the many erroneous statements regarding Our Lady College and the Blackfriars' Convent, which are to be found in the histories of Glasgow. It may suffice to say here, that I have written with these works before me, and that I have rejected nothing which they advance, except for reasons which I believe to be sufficient.

to which it has hitherto been resigned. I might have wished to attempt one or two observations on some of the more memorable localities of the ancient archiepiscopal town; but these prefatory remarks have been already too far prolonged; and I would hope that the pains which have been taken with the INDEX OF PLACES, may serve to make that, in so far as it goes, a not unsafe guide to the reader.

Tabula.

It remains only to refer to the subjoined TABLE OF CONTENTS, as indicating at once the dates of the several deeds, the sources whence they have been derived, and the manner in which they are exhibited in the following pages. It will readily be understood that, where a charter or other document is printed in an abridged form, the abbreviation has been effected by the rejection of merely technical phrases, or clauses altogether of common form. Nothing which can be regarded as material in any point of view, has been omitted; and the language and orthography of the original record have, in all instances, been faithfully preserved.
